Stingy Peace Not Wanted
Can You Write an Anthem?
Out of the Cradle
—By Arthur Brisbane—

HIRAM JOHNSON SAYS he will work for Hoover, and that disposes of California, if there were any doubt as to Hoover's home state.

When Senator Johnson says a thing he means it, and no one will be more surprised than he if California does not show a gigantic Hoover victory.

And, in the language of the day, "That goes double for Governor Smith and Senator Jim Reed, in Missouri." Certain men carry other men along with them by sheer force of sincerity. Johnson and Reed are men of that kind.

Soon the Senate will be asked to ratify the Peace Treaty, or whatever it may prove to be, prepared by this country and eagerly accepted by Europe—a little too eagerly, perhaps.

The Senate will think it over carefully, and wise Senators will not like the suggestion that we cut down our navy cost—unless the money saved is spent on a fighting air fleet. Only a silly country would substitute a scrap of paper for real defense.

To make a peace agreement effective put airships and submarines back of it.

Mrs. Brooks-Aten offers $6000 in prizes for a new national anthem. The idea is to get something that will not offend anybody, Britain especially.

There is no such anthem. Men are not ready for them.

But you might have a national song about the factories, gold reserve, oil wells and rising stock prices. That would suit many no longer interested in the rocket's red glare, or bombs bursting in air.

The trouble is, from Mrs. Brooks-Aten's viewpoint, that if we had any real trouble the people would hurry back to the good old "Say, can you see."

"Out of the cradle, endlessly rocking," we all came, poetically speaking. It is considered bad medicine now to rock the baby, it shakes his little brain. Evolution tells you that rocking babies pacifies them, because the wind used to rock your monkey-like ancestors living in trees. Many a good fundamentalist will stop rocking the baby for that reason that would not stop for doctors.

Ellen Terry after death goes back to the cradle. By her desire her ashes will rest in a pretty white cradle designed by her son. That seems an improvement on the usual cold urn.

Jose de Leon Toral, who killed Obregon, has made a full confession, according to the chief of police. The outside world will not know what pressure brought that confession.

Luis Morones, Minister of Labor, has resigned and is hiding, accused by the Agrarians of instigating Obregon's murder. Mexico seemed on the point of a civil war between city labor unions and the farmers. Morones' disappearance may avert that.

The Irish Free State decides the time has not come to invite King George to his dominion in the south of Ireland. The Free State would gladly welcome the King, but fears that ardent Irish Republicans might feel and act otherwise. With them, to feel is to act.

Many Irishmen, and women especially, still keep in mind Cromwell's short letter from Ireland, which ran about as follows:

"I have settled this land. I shot every 10th man, the rest I sent to the galleys, the monks I knocked on the head.—Oliver Cromwell."

Lieut. Paulin Paris, fine young Frenchman, is on his way, westbound across the Atlantic, on his seaplane, La Fregate. He comes by way of the Azores, which Lindbergh calls the best route for transatlantic flight. Lindbergh chose the longer, more dangerous water hop, to win a prize that would pay his expenses. Money

WIFE HUNTS CONNELL 6 WEEKS

Former President Henry J. Connell of the Somerville board of aldermen, former acting mayor and clubman, has been missing for six weeks, it became known today.

It is all but time a quiet search for him has been under way, but when it proved fruitless the police were notified.

The private search was conducted by relatives, headed by his wife, Mrs. Ruth A. Connell.

Connell, who is a Somerville business man, vanished on June 12, leaving his automobile and all his clothing, excepting those he wore, at home. It is not believed he had any large sum of money on his person.

According to his wife, the former alderman, for two weeks prior to his disappearance, spent a great deal of time around his home.

Every known friend, including his political and business associates, has been questioned in an endeavor to

Hard Battle Facing Gene, Says Dempsey

By JACK DEMPSEY
Former World's Heavyweight Champion

Fair Haven, N. J., July 24—The first time I ever saw Tom Heaney was the night when he caught up with Jim Maloney, smacked him a few times and ended the evening's entertainment in less than one round.

The fight was so short I didn't get much of an opportunity to size up the man from New Zealand, but just the same I came away figuring that this fellow is quite a puncher.

My next view of him was when he was taking plenty more punches on his chin than is customary.

All in all, the boys told me, it was a bad workout on Heaney's part. Well, if Sunday's show was a bad one—if Tom can do much better possible for him—and that he will.

BOY KILLED BY 'PETTER' IN SAUGUS

The fatal injuries suffered by Michael Sarni, Jr., 14-year-old North Revere boy, brutally beaten to death with a blunt instrument, today brought to light a chain of tragic happenings in a barn on the farm of his employer, E. Maxwell Hatch, in Saugus.

While police worked on a theory that young Sarni may have been slain by an irate "petter" who followed up a series of grotesque occurrences in the barn, culminating in the death of the boy.

Chief of Police Mansfield, Capt. John T. Stuart and Officer Roland Mansfield of Saugus, with State Inspector William Murray, were busy working out the visible angles of the case which becomes more shrouded in mystery each hour.

The theory that the youth was struck down by a "petter" was evolved when it was learned that the road to the Hatch barn has long been a favorite hating place for automobile spooners.

It was considered possible that young Sarni might have interfered with a party and was then beaten unconscious with a blackjack. Police therefore were questioning every by residents regarding machines parked in the road last Thursday night.

MAN HANGED HIMSELF

The other angle of the case, which tends to the old barn a sinister atmosphere, was brought to the attention of the authorities. Young Sarni, in an unconscious condition from which he never recovered, was found Friday morning lying directly under an innocent-appearing beam in the barn. It was from this beam, it was learned, that a man hanged himself three years ago.

While discussing this tragic occurrence, the police were approached by Asa Kimball of Saugus ave., a former employe on the farm, with a story of a mysterious happening in the barn only a few months ago.

Kimball declared that he went into the barn and suddenly lost consciousness. When he recovered, he felt the officers, one of his arms was broken. He could offer no explanation of what occurred, but declared he was simply presenting the facts.

Hatch, who is one of the overseers of the poor in Saugus, holds to the opinion that young Sarni was the victim of an accident, although ad-

SHIFT OBREGON DEATH BLAME FROM CHURCH

Mexico City, July 24 (AP)—A statement by Police Chief Zertuche was regarded today as paving the way for an official announcement withdrawing the recent assertion that the Catholic clergy were to blame for the assassination of Gen. Alvaro Obregon.

The statement said the clergy were cooperating in the investigation of the slaying. Last week Zertuche announced that "responsibility for the crime lies with the Catholic clergy."

His latest statement served to lessen the tension here, in religious circles a feeling of optimism was manifest.

Zertuche said that Jose de Leon Toral, the art student who killed Obregon, had made a complete confession.

Toral was himself an irresponsible victim of superior intellects, in the viewpoint of the ograrian political body. For that reason, said Aurelio Manrique, spokesman for the party, his death is not demanded by that element.

"We regard Obregon's assassin as a personage who was controlled by superior outside forces," said Manrique.

RASKOB QUITS GENERAL MOTORS FOR POLITICS

New York, July 24 (AP)—John J. Raskob, chairman of the national Democratic committee, has resigned as chairman of the General Motors Corporation finance committee, and as a member of the executive committee.

Mr. Raskob will remain as vice-president of the motor company and will resume his position as head of the finance committee at the close of Governor Smith's campaign for the presidency, it was learned.

An official statement, it was said, would be issued later in the day.

The General Motors directors had accepted his resignation from the committee, it was learned, "with regrets, but with the hope that he would resume its chairmanship after the election in the fall."

FLOOD HALTS TRAINS FROM N. Y. MANY HOURS

Boston-bound trains from New York were delayed two and a half to four and a half hours today by a flood in the railroad yards at New Haven, due to a heavy rain and a high tide that backed into the sewers.

All the ground electric system was put out of commission, including the switch controls, and an emergency crew had to work the switches by hand as well as shovel dirt from the rails. One train was derailed.

The three trains leaving New York about midnight were each two and a half hours late and the express, carrying papers and baggage exclusively, was four and a half. The Federal express from Washington was an hour and 20 minutes overtime

CHARGE 2 NOBILE MEN ATE BODY OF MALMGREN

London, July 24 (INS)—While resentment in Italy against hostile criticism of the Nobile expedition is growing, feeling in the Scandinavian countries is running higher.

The Daily Mail today printed a Copenhagen dispatch saying that it is persistently rumored that A. Mariano and F. Zappi, frantic with hunger, devoured part of the body of Professor Finn Malmgren, the lost Swedish scientist, who was with them.

Zappi, who was picked up with Mariano by the Russian ice-breaker Krassin and later transferred to the Citta di Milano, is reported at Copenhagen to be very ill as the result of hardships on the Arctic ice.

These rumors, it is believed, will tend to increase the friction between

CALL WRECK INQUEST; EL SERVICE RESUMED

Service on the Atlantic ave. loop of the Elevated from North Station to Dudley st. was resumed today, as arrangements were being made for an inquest next week into the fatal derailment of Sunday night.

Two passengers were killed and many injured in the derailment at the Harrison ave.-Beach st. curve.

Arrangements for the inquest were in charge of Police Inspector James A. Dennessey, who said Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster of the municipal court will assign a judge to hear testimony of passengers and the crew in charge of the train.

District Attorney Foley directed that the inquest be held.

There were a few passengers on one run of the loop trains today and although practically every passenger boarding the train had some comment to make o nthe accident, none seemed at all perturbed.

MOTHER OF COHAN, ONE OF FAMOUS 4, IS DYING

The curtain was slowly creaking down today on the earthly activities of a third of the famous "Four Cohans."

In her home at Monroe, N. Y., Mrs. Helen Frances Cohan, aged mother of George M. Cohan and widow of the nimble-footed Jere Cohan, is dying.

At her bedside are George, the world's most versatile man of the show shop; Mrs. George M. Cohan, who was Agnes Nolan of Harvard st., Dorchester; Georgette, daughter of the actor, and other members of the family.

There is little doubt, according to the physicians, that before many hours have passed, George Cohan will be the lone survivor of the "Four Cohans," who were featured in vaudeville three decades ago.

Born Helen Frances Costigan on the outskirts of Providence, Mrs. Cohan was married to Jere J. Cohan

RECORD SWIM SENDS WOMAN TO HOSPITAL

New York, July 24 (AP)—After breaking her own world's record for continuous swimming by remaining in the water 54 hours and 28 minutes, Mrs. Myrtle Huddleston of Mattoon, Ill., was in a hospital today. She was said to be in a delirious condition, moving her arms backward and forward in the motions of swimming.

Mrs. Huddleston learned to swim only two years ago and is the only woman ever to swim the Catalina channel to the California mainland. She bettered by four hours the endurance record she established in Chicago on May 31. Her endurance marks have never been approached by any man.

She was persuaded to leave the water at 5.37 yesterday afternoon by the manager of the outdoor pool where the swim was conducted. He believed the strain of the long grind was beginning to do her harm.

When she reached shallow water, she displayed no signs of fatigue. She waved to friends, shouted directions to her managers and posed for photographers. She told newspapermen she believed she could have continued for 20 hours more.

Her face and limbs, however, were badly swollen by the long contact with the salt water and she was carried from the pool and taken in an ambulance to St. Francis' hospital. Although it was said she was too ill to be weighed, it was estimated that her normal weight of 240 pounds had fallen to 215 pounds.

Mrs. Huddleston is 30 years old, a widow and the mother of a 12-year-old son.

Ghouls Robbed the Body of Mexican Ace, Carranza

Mount Holly, N. J., July 24—The body of Capt. Emilio Carranza, buried in Mexico City today, was robbed of valuables by ghouls after he was killed near here on his attempted non-stop flight from New York to Mexico City.

One of the thieves, whose identity was not disclosed, became so conscience-stricken he returned two rings, a military medal and several suits of the flier's underwear to police here.

mitting he has no sound solution of the problem.

The boy's father, Michael Sarni, of Franklin st., North Revere, is equally insistent on the other hand that his son was a victim of foul play, but the police thus far have been utterly unable to discover a motive.

BARN DOOR CLOSED.

One of the puzzling features of the case is the fact that the barn door, usually open on a summer day, was closed Friday morning when the boy was found.

Hatch said he knew of no one who went to the barn after the young farmhand completed the afternoon milking of three cows. He said the boy had placed the milk in the cooler, and had practically completed his work for the day.

The Saugus man said he had given Sarni and Allen Heath, another boy employed by him, the day off because of the heat, but with the understanding that Sarni was to return in the afternoon and milk. Children in the neighborhood said that the boy arrived at the Hatch place about 3:30 in the afternoon.

The funeral of the boy, who, according to the medical examiner died from cerebral hemorrhage, will be held tomorrow with requiem high mass at 9 o'clock in St. Anthony's Church, Revere. Burial will be in Malden.

Tried New York-Paris Swim, But Couldn't Quite Make It

New York, June 24 (INS)—Defeated by tides in his attempted non-stop swim from New York to Paris—that's right, non-stop swim—Roger Muller, 25, native of France and just now a patient in Ward's Island Hospital, is back today surrounded by vigilant keepers. Muller's daring dream of Christmas in the homeland was drowned in the treacherous currents of Hell Gate, which landed him in the Bronx rather than Paris.

Acute nostalgia is believed to have fostered the idea. Police supplied Muller with dry clothing and notified Ward's island authorities.

strolling trouper and unofficial veteran of the Civil War a number of years after that conflict had ended.

There were only two children born to the couple, Josephine, who was older than George, but who died some ten years ago while the wife of Fred Niblo, actor, and George, the "Yankee Doodle Boy."

Josephine was born in the early summer of 1876. George was born at Providence on July 4, 1878.

Before that time, Jere Cohan, the minstrel and song-and-dance man, had been touring the country in small-time houses with his wife, for several years.

He had married Helen Costigan and had taken her away from what at that time was practically farming country on the fringe of Providence.

She had no previous experience with the stage but she took to the new life without a falter and always loved it.

The Cohan couple were due to go back on the road a few weeks after George's birth, but they solved the infant problem by fitting a truck up as a traveling nursery and cradle.

After George arrived, the family made their home, when not touring, in North Brookfield, and Jere Cohan conducted a small harness and leather shop in the theatrical offseason.

The "Four Cohans" came into being in 1897 when the mother was persuaded to allow George and Josephine to become part of the act.

Until a quarter century ago, when George had established himself firmly in the world of the theater, the act continued.

Then advancing age began to tell on Mr. and Mrs. Cohan and the son retired them—kindly but firmly.

Their last formal appearance in "parts" was when the illustrious son brought them back on the boards to play in "Little Johnny Jones," a sweet-faced white-haired woman and an aging man whose admiring eyes followed every line and every gesture of George, who played the lead.

Jere Cohan died eight years ago, and since then the widow has aged rapidly, according to friends.

five miles an hour—barely a crawl—and several of the passengers declared they felt easier after the turn had been made.

In a statement today General Manager Edward Dana of the Elevated denied he had placed blame for Sunday's accident on the motorman, as was asserted in a morning newspaper. He denied also tating that the train was traveling at an excessive rate of speed.

"The exact cause of the accident has not been determined," he said, "and I do not think it is my place to attempt to advance any theory until the department of industry and the others investigating have determined the cause.

"I would like to state that I never said the motorman was probably going at too great a rate of speed. I am reserving all of my judgment till the proper time.

"It may be that the rain of Sunday night was a factor, not in the nature of slippery rails, because that would have been an element in the motorman's favor, but in the way of blinding vision, just as it might in an automobile. That was a pretty heavy downpour Sunday night.

"As for the statement that this was the motorman's first trip on the Atlantic ave. loop, the facts deny that.

"The motorman made ten trips over that loop under an instructor before running alone and had run over the loop since June.

"It is hard for the Elevated to have such an unfortunate accident happen after we have had such an enviable record since 1901 in not having killed a single overhead passenger.

"The Dudley st. accident of many years ago was occasioned because the motorman operating an empty train was reported to have had a heart attack."

Chicago, July 24 (AP)—A deflected bullet is the reason why four youths received life sentences instead of the death penalty for the killing of Pearl Eggleston, 17 years, old, theater usher in Berwyn, a suburb.

The quartet include Stanley Durham, 21, who fired the shot during the attempted holdup; Stanley Thomas, 19; Albert Mas, 20, and John Tulacz, 20.

Judge Frank Comerford said he did not mete out the death penalty because testimony showed the girl was killed by a bullet which had deflected from a cash register, and not while she was resisting the robbery. Durham had insisted he fired accidentally.

The influence wielded by those labor leaders must be wiped out of Mexican public affairs."

The statement was given in explanation of the part the Agrarian took in action by the Union of Revolutionary parties which decided to eliminate all members of the labor party from the legislative as well as the executive departments of the government. This action was a sequel to the resignations of Luis Morones, minister of labor, and two minor government officials who were members of the labor party. Morones is believed to be in hiding here.

The union has also opened fire on state governors who belong to the Morones party or who have expressed anti-Obregon sentiments.

BABE'S HOMER PUTS SICK BOY 'BACK IN GAME'

"Rully jingo! Is the Babe a big guy? Did he sock a home run when he came over here to see me? Am I better? Jingo!"

Out of sheer lack of breath, 13-year-old Brenton I. Stoltz of Allston st., Dorchester, ceased firing for a minute today as he told of Babe Ruth's unannounced visit to his bedside at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

For Brenton was a sick boy, recovering, of course, under special hospital care, when the Bambino of the Big Stick walked in on him after soaring his 40th home run over the fence at Fenway Park. In leaps and bounds he improved so that today he was moved to the veranda, and intermittently smiled and laughed at thoughts of the big visit.

"I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw the one and only Babe smiling down at me after the nurse announced a visitor," he said. "I burned all over and seemed to feel that it wasn't so bad to be in a hospital at that.

GUARDS PRIZED BALL.

"And when he handed me the home run ball with his name on it, I just felt like jumping up out of bed.

Brenton wrapped the ball in yards and yards of hospital gauze and made an outer covering of a napkin to insure even against one scratch.

Even to Daniel Driscoll, immigration inspector who lies in the next bed, he entrusted it for only a fleeting moment. "And he's my pal, too," he explained.

"Between the doctors here, Babe's visit and a longing to get out to Fenway Park, I'm going to do a handspring out of this bed pretty soon," he broke out again.

"Now, Brenton, remember you're not wholly strong yet; you must take it easy," a pretty nurse cut in.

BETTER THAN A "HOMER"

"Say, did Babe Ruth ever call on you?" exclaimed young Stan. "Do you you know how it feels to have a guy bigger than any president or anything in the world visit your bedside?"

But the nurse blushingly vanished, resigned to the fact that pent-up enthusiasm must explode and it might as well be now.

The boy, son of a Dorchester hairdresser, often dreamed of a visit from the one he admired. Through a friend the wish reached the Yankee dressing room at Fenway park and the visit resulted.

"There is more satisfaction in seeing that kid smile than all the home runs in the world," was the Babe's comment as he climbed into his auto and left the hospital after the visit.

STARVING BOY COLLAPSES IN STREET

Faced with the grim specter of starvation after days of wandering the streets in fruitless search of employment, Frank Slavik, 19-year-old Newark (N. J.) youth, collapsed on Tremont st. early today after weekly declining assistance from passers-by.

Examination of the boy at City Hospital revealed that he was on the brink of starvation and the youth admitted to the doctors that he had not touched food for four days.

Rather than ask for aid the boy said he tramped the streets fighting the pangs of hunger in the hope that each weary step might bring him to the work he sought.

As he neared his rooming house at 348 Tremont st. today, after an all-night hunt, the boy staggered and fell before help could reach him. Even while he tried to assure those who gathered about him that he was all right the youth lapsed into unconsciousness.

He told hospital authorities that he had come from Newark, N. J., a week ago in search of work.

HUB BOY TELLS OF ATTEMPT TO KILL CALLES

The fact that an attempt was made to assassinate Pres. Calles of Mexico within a few hours after the killing of Alvaro Obregon became known here today through a letter written by Louis J. O'Malley, M. I. T. student, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. O'Malley of Boston.

The letter, which slipped through the censorship, revealed for the first time the details of the attempt to cut down the head of the Mexican republic, who, as a result, is believed by Mexicans to bear a charmed life.

According to the writer, who said he was an eye-witness, a volley of shots was discharged at Calles, but not one found its mark.

Young O'Malley also pointed out that the assassination of Obregon is generally laid at the feet of the C. R. O. M, the Mexican anarchist labor organization headed by Morones, who is now in hiding, after being ousted from Calles' cabinet, in which he was secretary of labor and commerce.

"When we arrived home from a ride to Puebla and learned of the assassination of Obregon," wrote O'Malley, "I decided to stay and see the excitement, assured because all of Obregon's crowd are said to oppose Calles. As a matter of fact, when Calles went to Obregon's house some two hours after the body of Obregon had reached there, he found a tremendous crowd milling around.

"Suddenly 10 or 20 shots were fired point blank at Calles. How they missed him I don't know. I was hanging to a lamp post right in front of the house taking a picture of the crowd at the time. Five minutes later they had two companies of soldiers, with fixed bayonets, lining the square around the house and you couldn't take the pictures or get within miles of the place. I tried everything I know to get some more pictures, but with the soldiers punching you in the ribs and telling you to move you can't argue, particularly as they do not speak your language."

The writer of the letter is only 21 years old, but is already a world traveler. He is a senior at M. I. T., studying electric and chemical engineering, and is in Mexico as the companion of a college friend, a native of the country.

According to his father, a well-known Boston advertising man and former newspaperman, Louis O'Malley was due home last Wednesday, but stayed over because of the shooting of President-Elect Obregon.

ployes as to his whereabouts, they learned he had not been there since last week.

It was then learned by police, to whom Mrs. Gobeille appealed, that her husband cashed two checks totaling approximately $25,000 last Tuesday, one in Clinton and the other in Hartford.

He had this money with him when in conference the next day with the local manager of a housing company which had bonded the two Connecticut contracts. It is supposed this cash was for his payroll, but he did not return to Connecticut and the work is now at a standstill, the men being unpaid.

the Scandinavians and the Italian members of the expedition. So far as known here there is nothing upon which to base the rumor of cannibalism beyond the fact that Malmgren's body is missing and there has been great conflict in stories regarding his fate.

Today, Gen. Nobile and his rescued mates were expected to reach Narvik aboard the Russian ice-breaker Krassin on their way back to Italy. They will journey from Russia to Rome by train. They have been ordered to speed home by Premier Mussolini.

Oslo, July 24 (AP)—Various phases of the Italia disaster seemed likely today to remain a mystery until an inquiry had been made by the Italian government.

Dr. Salvator Arcente Italian correspondent at Kings Bay, in a dispatch to the newspaper Tidens Tegn has urged that judgment as to the death of Dr. Finn Malmgren be reserved until a full report of the tragedy can be published.

Dr. Malmgren was left dying on the ice, according to the statements attributed to his companions, Capt. Mariano and Zappi. Russian advices from Kings Bay state that Zappi when rescued was wearing, in addition to his own, clothes belonging to Dr. Malmgren.

An unconfirmed rumor was in circulation today that the Norwegian aviator, Capt. Hulmar Riiser-Larsen, had found Dr. Malmgren's body.

Dr. Aponte, who is correspondent for the Corriere Della Sera of Rome, asserted here that Gen. Umberto Nobile was so weak and ill when he was rescued from the ice and so depressed by his mishaps and the unfortunate position of his comrades that he was unable to make a clear report of what had happened. Dr. Aponte concluded: "A detailed and clear report, however, will be written and submitted to the Italian nation and the world."

EX-LEADER IN SOCIETY TOILS IN STORE

New York, July 24—From the position of scullery maid to leader in society, then to star as silver screen actress, only to revert again to the humble job of department store clerk. That is the novel experience of Mrs. Martha Baldwin of Newport and New York.

Mrs. Baldwin, 29, blonde and pretty, who divorced Burton J. because he was too attentive to Lillian Pickering, his 17-year-old secretary, is so telling, she said, because her former husband has failed to support their two children.

The tale of Mrs. Baldwin's meteoric career properly begins with the prestige enjoyed for more than a generation at Newport by the Muenchinger-King, the fashionable boarding house where Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and her sister, the late Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, as well as a host of other notables, always stopped while opening their summer homes.

About 10 years ago, when advanced in age, Mrs. Amanda Muenchinger, owner of the establishment, rented a suite to the Rev. Burton J. Baldwin of New Haven, Conn., who had come to tutor Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and young Herman Oelrichs. The following year Mrs. Muenchinger took Baldwin in as an assistant, he having dropped the ministerial title.

When Mrs. Muenchinger died a year later, she left her entire estate, valued at more than $200,000, to Baldwin. Within a few months he married Martha, then a servant girl waiting on table and doing general housework.

As the wife of the proprietor she blossomed forth in silks and satins, entertained and was entertained at the exclusive Embassy Club and was constantly seen, with members of the younger set, driving along Ocean Drive in one of Baldwin's several automobiles.

Two children were born to them, but Mrs. Baldwin, then but 23, while her husband was nearing 60, was not contented with having graduated from the kitchen to the parlor and she sighed for new worlds to conquer.

She aspired to be a movie star like her countrywomen, Anna Q. Nilsson, Greta Nissen and Greta Garbo, and persuaded her husband to take an apartment in New York so that she could mingle with the proper people in the proper environment. A good mixer, and unusually pretty, she was soon taken on as an extra and appeared in several Famous Players screen plays.

A year ago she left her husband after he had engaged Miss Pickering. A short time afterwards she obtained a divorce and custody of their children. A few days ago the wolf knocking at the door, she was forced to seek employment.

Baldwin is said to be in Newport, where he was seen last week entertaining his pretty secretary at luncheon in a leading hotel.

Hub Mail Flier Is 9-in-1 Hero—Saves 9 Lives!

Capt. Richard W. Mackie, flying the airmail plane from Hadley Field, N. J., to Boston, today qualified for all sorts of Humane Society and Carnegie medals by saving nine lives in midair.

At Hadley Field, Capt. Mackie found a kitten wandering aimlessly about, and placed it in the baggage compartment of his plane, behind the pilot's seat, just before taking off for Boston.

The kitten curled up contentedly when Capt. Mackie laid the nose of his ship on the line for Boston. Airmail pilots do no lingering to admire the scenery, and the plane roared on its way at a speed of 110 miles an hour.

About half the distance had been covered, with the plane 2000 feet up, when Capt. Mackie felt something brush by his head. Turning he saw the kitten balancing gingerly on the edge of the cockpit, gathering itself for a spring into space.

The pilot's hand shot out, seized the kitten by the tail and the next minute it was safely buttoned under his flying jacket, to complete the journey to Boston in safety.

$150,000 THEFT IS CHARGED TO 'MODEL MAN'

New York, July 24 (INS)—A model husband and father, who endeared himself to his neighbors by his sober, industrious life, today is a fugitive from justice, charged with stealing $150,000 from his employers.

Detectives all over the United States and Canada are seeking William H. Pilkington, 38, who lived for six years with his wife and two young sons on Miles Squires rd., Yonkers.

He was last heard of a week ago when he and his family checked out of a hotel in Vancouver, B. C., presumably for Japan.

Pilkington was New York representative of Joshua Hoyle & Sons, Ltd., cotton converters of Manchester, Eng. He came here as a salesman six years ago and soon was promoted to the post of American manager. His father is a trusted employe of the firm.

Early in June Pilkington started on a vacation, his first in six years. Visiting the office on June 13 he found auditors making their semiannual examination of the books. He left hastily and has not been seen since. The audit revealed that the money was missing.

After discovery of the thefts, which had extended over two years, detectives visited Pilkington's Yonkers home. It had been stripped of its furniture, some of which had been sold to neighbors at ridiculously low prices. These neighbors revealed that the Pilkingtons had gone to Canada.

EARHART GIRL RIDES CAB OF LOCOMOTIVE

Pittsburgh, July 24 (AP)—Amelia Earhart left Pittsburgh today in the cab of a Pennsylvania railroad locomotive after a brief tour of the city.

The young woman, the first of her sex to complete a transatlantic flight, donned overalls and climbed aboard the engine pulling "The Juanita" at the Pennsylvania station. She remained in the cab until the train reached Greensberg. The train was bound for New York.

"Now I feel at home," said Amelia as she appeared in overalls ready to enter the cab. "Dirt and grease don't bother me."

Arriving here shortly before 9 o'clock this morning, the young aviatrix found a large crowd awaiting her—a crowd that held up the reception committee's plans for 20 minutes while police strove to clear a path for her to the automobile that was to convey her about the city.

Despite the comparatively early hour, thousands jammed the sidewalks to greet a glimpse of the young woman, Wilmer Stultz, the pilot of the monoplane Friendship on the transatlantic flight, and Lou Gordon, the mechanic. Other thousands gathered about the city-county building, where the fliers were officially received and introduced to the throng.

ORDER 6 PLANES FOR NEW TRAIN-AIR TOUR LINE

New York, July 24 (INS)—An order for delivery next month of six folding-wing cabin monoplanes to be used in a new plane-train passenger service between Chicago and Los Angeles, was announced today. The planes are on order by the Scenic Airways, Inc., of Chicago, from the Fairchild Company.

Fare for the trip by airplane and railroad train in two stages will be $150. The journey across the continent will be made in 36 hours, saving 32 hours in the present railroad traveling time.

BROUGHT BACK FROM N. H. WITH THREE WEEKS' BRIDE

Brought from Plymouth, N. H., with a tearful bride of three weeks at his side, Edward L. Huson, formerly of St. Stephens st., Back Bay, faced municipal court today charged with larceny of $2364.

Huson was employed by the Mages Sales Company of Union st., North End. Armed with a larceny warrant Inspectors James Driscoll and Thomas Joyce, made the trip to New Hampshire by auto to make the arrest.

Huson was held in bonds of $4000 for hearing August 7.

FIRE DESTROYS TEN AUTOS

Ten automobiles, five of them trucks and as many pleasure cars were burned today in a fire that threatened the tanks of the Standard Oil Company on Pope st., East Boston. The fire, of undetermined origin, destroyed a one-story wooden structure used as an ice storage plant directly across the street from the tanks. The total damage is estimated at $5000. The building was owned by Terrence Trainor and occupied by Arnold Wilkerton.

WORKER KNOCKED OFF STAGING IN DORCHESTER

John Manganaro, 38, sufferer concussion of the scalp and lacerations today in a new building in Columbia rd., near Uphams Corner, Dorchester, when a bundle of floor boards being hoisted to the building knocked him off a staging on the second floor, 15 feet to the first floor. He was taken to the City hospital.

BURY CARRANZA WITH HEROES

Mexico City, July 24 (AP)—The body of Capt. Emilio Carranza, whose good-will flight to the United States brought him both success and death, today was borne to Dolores Cemetery to a section reserved for the foremost figures in his country's history.

The procession began from the War Department wing of the National Palace, where the body had lain in state since yesterday, through the heart of the business and residential sections. All night long a guard of honor had been maintained over his coffin and hundreds of persons passed through the room.

Dwight W. Morrow, American ambassador, was one of the first to reach the War Department, and soon after came American army officers who had escorted the body from New York to Mexico City, high officials and Sebastian Carranza, father of the dead airman.

Great crowds, almost as large as those which saw the arrival of the body in Mexico City yesterday, packed the streets. Government offices and business houses were closed.

The casket, still covered with the Mexican and United States flags, was showered with flowers.

Ellen Terry Is Buried Amid Gay Flowers

Small Hythe, Kent, Eng., July 24 (AP)—This little Kentish hamlet bade farewell today to its much loved Ellen Terry in a setting of warm sunshine, brightly hued flowers from the fields and village gardens and with everything removed suggesting the funeral gloom she so greatly abhorred.

The little parish church here was the scene of the funeral services. There was nothing dirgelike in the music which came from the untoned organ and the whole service was one of lovely simplicity. At the conclusion of the burial office there were short prayers by the Rev. W. Watson of Wittersham, who assisted the Vicar of Penterden in conducting the services. Then came the Nunc Dimittis and the funeral of the great actress was over.

Practically the whole village flocked to the chapel to pay its last tribute. Farm laborers left their work in the hayfields for a brief hour to attend the services while at the church was a picturesque guard of honor in the form of a number of haywreckers in shirtsleeves who lined up outside the door and the coffin was carried in and out under an arch which they made of hay rakes, forks and shepherd's crooks.

BOTH PARTIES PICK ON EAST AS BATTLEGROUND

New York, July 24 (INS)—The Atlantic seaboard from Maine to Maryland was clearly marked today by both the Democratic and Republican high commands as the crucial battle ground of the 1928 presidential campaign.

Three political gatherings of the first magnitude here within the last twenty-four hours have established the scenes of the major encounters. New York state is to be won by a political Battle of the Marne, and Massachusetts is to be a sort of one torical Verdun. New Jersey, Maryland, Rhode Island and Delaware are red-flagged on the huge wall maps of the campaign strategists.

A heap of political straws thrown to the wind in the three gatherings revealed this year's mid-summer campaign zephyrs to be something of a gale and disclosed at the same time an astonishing agreement between Democratic and Republican strategists as to where the most blood is likely to be spilled between now and November.

IN G. O. P. TERRITORY

This spot comprises exactly all the territory of the original thirteen colonies lying north of the Potomac. In this normally rock-ribbed Republican territory in national elections, this year's contest will be decided.

So important is this sector in the view of Dr. Hubert Work, Republican national chairman, that the day-to-day campaign management will be under his personal supervision. He will be aided by an advisory committee composed of the national committee members from the eleven states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware.

Of this group, New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Delaware, New Jersey and Maryland, with a total of 93 electoral votes, are regarded as "fighting chance" states by both strategy boards.

BIG TEST IN NEW YORK

The Republican chieftains regard the region west of the Alleghanies as "in the bag," just as the Democratic managers see the "solid south," safely in the Democratic column for November 6.

The crux of the eastern struggle, according to detailed campaign plans disclosed today, is to be in New York state. Here, Governor Smith polled 1,627,000 votes for governor in 1924 while President Coolidge was winning the state from John W. Davis with a total vote of only 1,920,000. On the basis of these figures, Democratic managers stake their hopes on a switch of a bare 100,000 votes in the entire state to win New York's 45 votes in the electoral college—this on the generous assumption, they assert, that Herbert Hoover can poll as big a vote as did President Coolidge.

WOMEN MEET TO ORGANIZE G.O.P. DRIVE IN EAST

Washington, July 24 (AP)—Looking forward to an active part in the battle for eastern presidential votes, Republican national committeewomen from the Middle and North Atlantic states gathered here today to co-ordinate their political activities into a definite campaign program.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Alvin T. Hert of Kentucky, director of the women's division, sessions were called behind closed doors. The speakers were announced as National Chairman Work, National Secretary Fort, Judge J. Francis Burke, counsel for the national committee, and Mrs. Hert.

In addition to those from the East and Northeast, committeewomen from Illinois, Ohio, Tennessee and North Carolina were here for the meeting.

Mrs. W. E. Kennan of North Carolina was optimistic of Republican prospects in her state. She declared the present campaign afforded the first real opportunity for the establishment of a successful party organization there.

The committeewomen attending from the New England states were announced as:

Miss Katherine Byrne, Connecticut; Mrs. Guy P. Gannett, Maine; Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Massachusetts; Mrs. Nellie D. Parker, New Hampshire.

Committeewomen from two states were unable to attend and sent proxies. They were Mrs. Mary Elizabeth E. Sharpe for Mrs. Charles J. Steedman of Rhode Island, and Mrs. Margaret M. Tucker for Mrs. George Orvis of Vermont.

Hoover Finishing His Speech of Acceptance

Stanford University, Cal., July 24 (INS)—Herbert Hoover today put the finishing touches to his speech accepting the Republican presidential nomination and laying down issues for the 1928 campaign. He expected to complete his task by tomorrow. Saturday he leaves on a four-day fishing trip.

Hoover was in good humor today after receiving the plaudits of his alma mater last night. The student body of Stanford, led by Templeton Peck, '29, president of the Students' Union, paraded to the nominee's home on San Juan Hill, overlooking the university campus.

"I'd rather have this reception from Stanford men than from any body of men in this country. I thank you for it," said Hoover.

BIG OIL DEAL IS RUMORED

New York, July 24 (AP)—The New York World today says signs discernible in Wall Street indicate that out of the oil situation that has held the attention of the country the last four days may come a working combination of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Company, involving hundreds of millions of dollars in capital holdings of the two corporations.

Signs pointing to such a combination, said the World, were seen in the contemplated doubling of the capacity of the Sinclair pipe line, which is controlled equally by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation.

If this presages a combination between Col. Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard of Indiana, and Harry F. Sinclair, it means the Standard of Indiana is taking steps to free itself from Rockefeller interests which have been trying to oust Col. Stewart.

Word of their plight was carried to the far-flung stations of the mounted police by telephone and radio.

The party is headed by John Fuller, 21, of Keokuk, Ia., and included Peter Beddam, 24, of Crystal Lake, and Gordon Armstrong, 20, of Rock Ia., and Max J. Kane, 22, of Iowa City.

STILLINGTON HALL ADDS "PYGMALION" TO ITS LONG LIST OF TRIUMPHS, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Mrs. Fuller Heads Distinguished Audience at Leslie Buswell's Feature

FROM TRIUMPH TO TRIUMPH THE STILLINGTON HALL season moves on with utmost brilliance. In whatever golden-lettered book artistic achievements are chronicled, a generous page or two should record Leslie Buswell's efforts, with last evening's "Pygmalion" specially written down in gilded phrases. Everything was perfect. The audience. The company. The stage set that Stillington itself is. Even the Lady Moon considered the evening auspicious for an appearance, and sailed serenely high above the treetops to add the final theatrical touch.

THE AUDIENCE MINGLED THE CORPS DIPLOMATIQUE, officialdom and smart society equally. Individually it was decidedly interesting. Collectively it filled lovely Stillington to overflowing; as gem encrusted as any Metropolitan gala, just as gorgeously bewrapped and gowned, and far more intimately informal. What other small and intimate theater summons its audience back from a stroll on the terrace by a clanging ship's bell? At Stillington it is done thus, when intermissions end. It's just another indication of the Buswell originality.

LAST EVENING THE FIRST LADY CAME DOWN TO STILLINGTON from Rye to be a "first nighter" at "Pygmalion," and to graciously occupy the one and only box the small theater boasts. It's perched up under the rafters, a balcony-like contrivance, usually (as on last evening) dedicated to personages to be specially distinguished. Mrs. Fuller, radiant in sequins and tulle, and Mrs. Bryce J. Allan in dull black chiffons and pearls, were in the box. They had a bird's-eye view of attractive stage and glittering audience.

THEY SAW, ON THE STAGE, THE GIFTED MRS. FITZWILLIAM SARGENT emerge from a cockney girl chrysalis to waft her butterfly wings in Mayfair, as Shaw, the satirist, arranges that metamorphosis. They watched "Pygmalion" gradually succumb to the charmer. The entire kaleidoscope of the audience was spread out before them. Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman's coat of many colors was no small contribution to the colorful mosaic. It revealed a smart frock of midnight black lace and chiffon, and glinted every color and tint in a 1828 version of the antique patchwork quilt.

MRS. WHITMAN WAS HOSTESS FOR A LARGE GROUP. IN IT were Mrs. Harcourt Amory in seashell-tinted crepe, and handsome Mrs. Cornelius Conway Felton, in a lovely pastel-tinted frock. It also included that lovely young matron, Mrs. John Mitchell, blue eyed and curly locked, whose perfect Greuze type of beauty is a byword in her set, just as in the days when she was Miss Elizabeth Caswell and danced with royal princes. Last evening she was a magnet for every eye. And none but she could so successfully wear a frock and wrap of brightest Chinese scarlet. The frock was a slender sheath and the wrap had an odd arrangement of monkish collar.

MR. GEORGE HUSTON WAS IN MRS. WHITMAN'S PARTY. HE is the young man who carried Stillington audiences by storm season, when bijou opera held the boards. Mrs. Joseph Leiter sh forth a personage in any assembly, however, distinguished as it may She was with the German Ambassador's party. Her gown for th premiere was a handsome acquired affair, and her jewels some of the marvelous pearls from the Leiter collection. Mrs. George Putnam's statuesque good looks and smoothly coiffed head enhanced a gown of gilt and black, a smartly molded diaphanous affair.

DR. MAYNARD LADD AND MRS. LADD WERE ON HAND TO see Miss Gabriella Ladd acquit herself cleverly in a minor role. Mrs. John Lawrence wore a blue ensemble, and so also did Mrs. E. Sohier Welch, an airy turquoise chiffon. Mrs. John K. Howard, all in white, gown and furred wrap, was a vision of beauty. Mrs. Charles Moores boyishly coiffed golden hair took an added gleam from contrasting black. Her gown was satin and her wrap one of the satin squares geometrically designed and modernistic. Mrs. Moore is to be cast in "Pet-y Ibbetson," when the DuMaurier play succeeds "Pygmalion" as a Stillington offering, some time in August.

WAS NORTH SHORE SOCIETY MARKING TIME UNTIL THE appearance of Miss Helen Wills? Essex County Club courts yesterday, with a series of interesting feminine racquet wielders serving up interesting tennis, had but the most meagre of galleries. Possibly a changeable July sky, ranging from promised sun to sudden tiny showers, served to keep away most everyone but the enthusiast who is inherently a gallery-ite. Today, if the starlike Miss Wills really meets Miss Louise Iselin in tennis combat, the gallery will be everything in numbers a gallery should be for the invitation tournament.

COLOR BLOOMED ON THE COURTS AS WELL AS IN THE stands. High colors. Bright colors. Flaunting bits as primitive as the rainbow. Miss Marjorie Morrill, freshly home from honor winning on European courts, bound her locks with a sunflower yellow bandeau and wore a sweater to match. Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer favored the sunny yellow. Mrs. Roger Griswold's bandanna bandeau was a gypsy blending of scarlets and yellows. Miss Marian Morse bound her hair with bright King's blue, to match the embroidery on her odd Chinese jacket.

MISS HELEN AND MISS PRISCILLA RHODES EMPHASIZED sisterhood by similar gay blue silk scarves to hold shorn locks during lively court contests. Miss Virginia Rice also was devoted to blue. But Miss Eleonora Sears resolutely adheres to white. Her mesh cap, adopted a season or two ago, still is high favorite with the energetic "Elec." Her curly hair is safely confined within its soft contours. One wonders what a local tournament would be like without the presence of Miss Sears, in the gallery or on the courts. There's not many she misses.

'DIVORCE MILL' PROTEST TO U.S.

Paris, July 24 (AP)—French attorneys have entered a protest against the "morally reprehensible" conduct of American lawyers in regard to the "foreign divorce mill."

The protest was sent to the American Bar association and to the New York Bar association and a copy was forwarded to Louis Barthou, minister of justice.

The action was taken after three French lawyers had been reprimanded and three suspended from practice two to eight months for having speeded American divorces. No action could be taken against the American attorneys alleged to have hired them since Americans cannot practice before the French courts.

Nice, France, July 24 (AP)—A report was current here today that following the Paris American divorce mill inquiry a similar investigation had been started here. It was thought action was likely to involve several British lawyers who have taken a big share of the American divorce business.

JAMES M. BECK, JR., WED IN LONDON TO DIVORCEE

London, July 24 (INS)—James M. Beck, Jr., son of former United States Solicitor James Montgomery Beck, and the Hon. Mrs. Lionel Tennyson, whose marriage last week was suddenly postponed, were married today at the Paddington registry office. The marriage last week was to have been secret and its mysterious postponement caused much comment in society circles. Mrs. Tennyson, who is a sister of Lord Glenconner, has been married twice, while Beck had been married once.

MAN ROWING ACROSS ATLANTIC PASSES BERMUDA

Rosenheim, Bavaria, Germany, July 24 (AP)—Frans Romer, who left Lisbon on March 3 in an attempt to row across the Atlantic in a collapsible boat, was several hundred miles southeast of Bermuda on July 18. This was reported to the firm here which built Romer's craft by the Jugo-Slavian steamer, the Epidauro. The radio despatch from the steamer said that Romer was sighted at 23½ degrees north latitude and 59 degrees west longitude.

SAY U. S. PLANS CHINA PARLEY

Berlin, July 24 (INS)—A report that the United States is planning to call an international conference to revise Chinese treaties was published by the Vossische Zeitung today.

Recent cablegrams from Washington quoted Stephen G. Porter, chairman of the House committee on foreign affairs, as proposing the United States make treaties with the Chinese Nationalist administration to replace old pacts.

Olympic Horsemen Will Honor Dowager Queen

Hilversum, Holland, July 24 (AP)—Dowager Queen Emma's 70th birthday August 2 will be the occasion of one of the most notable calls ever paid her.

Instead of the diplomats of many nations such as used to congratulate her, 150 participants from 21 nations in the Olympic equestrian sports, including the American army men, decided today to pay their respects. They will gallop from Hilversum to Soestdijk, which is nearby and where Queen Emma's summer palace is located in the midst of an immense park of century-old trees.

Queen Emma is loved by Hollanders as much as Queen Wilhelmina and has just completed a swing around the circle, taking her through most of the Dutch provinces, where she was given an ovation at every place visited.

U. S. MARINES LEAVING CHINA

Shanghai, July 24 (AP)—Twelve hundred American marines have been ordered withdrawn from China. A detachment at Tientsin is returning to America.

The reduction is expected to be called out shortly and will reduce the American defense forces in China from 4600 to 2500. Those to be withdrawn include officers and men who arrived in China between February and July, 1927.

It is understood the withdrawal is the result of Admiral Mark L. Bristol's recommendation that the Chinese situation does not require the present force.

"NERVES—pooh, pooh!" That was the way Mother answered my famous old excuse. And she did more than that—she gave me a real remedy for that feeling of distraught, weary irritability!

I'd tried the whole range of ordinary laxatives; health foods that took weeks to act, cathartics that wracked the system. And I'd come to distrust them terribly . . .

Feen-a-mint is different!

It's just like a bit of delicious chewing gum. You don't swallow it—you chew it!

Its magic laxative principle is released slowly, the way science meant it to be released. It actually becomes part of the digestive fluids—does not disturb digestion. It works with the body—not against it!

Smith Delays First Gun

As the Elephant and Donkey Race

New York, July 24—Governor Al Smith has no intention of launching his active campaign for the presidency until after Labor Day, and possibly not before the middle of September, despite the pleas of some of his advisers that he swing into action as soon as possible after his notification next month.

Unless the Governor changes his mind his campaign will consist chiefly of a dozen or fifteen speeches in the chief cities throughout the east, the middle west and possibly in some of the border states.

Many of his close friends, however, are urging him to make an old-fashioned stump-speaking tour of the country and, in the end, he may follow their advice if he feels his health will stand the strain.

There is one sound the Governor has taken in connection with his campaign from which he will not be swayed and that is to broadcast his speeches over a nationwide radio hook-up. He feels the radio has been a great advantage in his gubernatorial campaigns in New York state and that it can be used with the same success in his campaign for the presidency.

New York, July 24 (AP)—William Allen White, in town on the way to Europe, has been ducking questions about Governor Smith by saying the American people are interested in something besides politics. Upon a percentage basis of population interest he would give politics 13 and baseball 40.

New York, July 24 (AP)—Broadcasting of the acceptance speeches of Governor Smith and Mr. Hoover is to be done without cost to the candidates, M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, has announced. He said the NBC system was being offered gratuitously as a matter of public service, "because the speeches are of national importance."

Houston, Tex., July 24 (AP)—Negroes will be barred from the Democratic primaries in Harris County by decision of Federal Judge J. C. Hutcheson, Jr., in the case of J. R. Gilesby, negro, against Guy Harris, chairman of the county executive committee. Gilesby sought an injunction to prevent members of the executive committee and county election officials from barring negroes at the primary.

Stanford University, Cal., July 24 (AP)—Senator Hiram Johnson has tendered his services to Hoover, although they are not entirely in accord on electrical power question

Washington, July 24 (AP)—Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican vice-presidential candidate, will be used in the oratorical off-saive on both the eastern and middle western fronts Cabinet officers and others high in the Republican organization are enlisting also for duty in September and October drives.

Washington, July 24 (AP)—Republicans are organizing a mobile speaking squad to be used on a moment's notice wherever the fight is heaviest.

Columbia, S. C., July 24 (AP)—The Democratic executive committee has upheld a ruling that voters in the Democratic state primary be required by party oath to support party ticket in national election, but failure to vote in general election will be overlooked.

MYSTERY GIRL IN HOSPITAL

Miss Mary Cronin, 27, of 233 West Fifth st., South Boston, is now at the Psychopathic Hospital for treatment and observation.

She was taken to the institution after a consultation of the Chelsea Memorial Hospital staff as to her mental condition.

The girl came into the Chelsea police station Sunday evening in a weakened condition and asked Sergt. Walter Barden if he could help her. She refused to give any information about herself, and as her condition was bordering on collapse she was removed to the Chelsea Memorial Hospital.

Examination and questioning by the house doctors failed to shed light on the case.

SENATOR CURTIS WILL SPEAK IN BAY STATE

Washington, July 24—An extensive speaking program, including the East as well as his homeland in the middle West, is under consideration by Senator Curtis of Kansas Republican vice-presidential candidate.

Senator Curtis announced he had invitations for speeches in Indiana, Illinois, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

The Kansan said he probably would speak in each of the States.

CLASS CANDY AS FOOD, NOT A LUXURY

The time-honored gift of candy was revealed as a food offering today rather than a luxurious present, in the third annual business session of the Retail Silver Jubilee National Convention at Symphony Hall.

Thousands of dollars, the convention was told by Arthur T. Connelly, sales manager of the candy department, has been spent to rid the public mind of the old fallacy that candy is injurious to the health.

"Not only United Drug Co. experts but medical experts who are authoritative on the subject, agree that candy is no longer to be considered a luxury," he said.

CANDY A FOOD

"Candy contains the proteins necessary to sustain life and should be classed as a food.

"The growth of the candy business is one of the biggest items of the Rexall business. It shows that the old fallacy that candy is injurious is fast fading from the mind of the public.

"Testimony supported by reputable experts and physicians will prove that the product contains more food value than some items actually listed as food."

Manager Connelly was one of many speakers to address the druggists before they adjourned for the day.

He was followed by E. E. Burlingame, district manager for Philadelphia of the L. K. Liggett Co. He described the growth of that phase of the business in his territory and described his methods for the benefit of dealers in other sections.

ON INSPECTION TRIP.

A. W. Campbell, secretary of the United Mutual Fire Insurance Co., opened the session with advice on proper protection against fire.

Open discussions on candy, toilet goods and other branches of the business were opened under the direction of George F. Sargent, Harry W. Taylor and Arthur T. Connelly.

Following the business session, the men delegates, headed by a police escort on motorcycles, left for an inspection of the executive offices and the Boston laboratories and a trip through the factory of the United Candy Co.

Cornish, N. H., July 24 (INS)—Once the Asiatic fleet roared in salute to Dewey but so fleeting is fame that his death almost passed unnoticed. Rear Admiral William M. Folger was dead here today at the age of 84. He was a native of Marallon, O.

He commanded the cruiser New Orleans in the Spanish-American war, commanded the Philippine squadron in 1898 and the cruiser squadron in Pacific waters in 1905, just before he retired.

YOUNG HITS AT HUB P. O. DELAY

Everything is ready for the construction of a new federal building in Boston except the cutting of red tape, according to Benjamin Loring Young, who embodied that opinion in a letter to Ogden L. Mills, acting secretary of the Treasury.

Young urges in his letter that reconsideration of the site be not undertaken and points out that public convenience requires that the building be on the present post-office site.

$800,000 GAMBLING PROFIT OF CONTRACTOR TRACED

New York, July 24 (INS)—While a federal grand jury today continued its attempts to trace the millions of the late John M. Phillips, "sewer pipe king," it was reported that gambling houses had yielded him a fortune of $800,000. A nationally known gambler and a wealthy contractor are said to have shared with Phillips in the profits of the gambling houses.

HARRIMAN FOR TUNNEL TO AIRPORT

Construction of a vehicular tunnel connecting Haymarket sq. with the Boston airport is strongly urged by Henry L. Harriman, chairman of the division of metropolitan planning and president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

"The co-operation which State and city officials have shown in providing Boston with one of the country's best airports is most gratifying," declares Harriman.

The State, he explained, is leasing the airport property to the city for 20 years at $1 a year and the city is modernizing it at a cost of $250,000. He hoped that the city would take advantage of the enabling act passed by the Legislature and build a vehicular tunnel to connect Haymarket sq. with the airport, which would reduce to a ten-minute run the distance from the airport to the city proper.

WANTS ONE CENSUS UNIT

From the census standpoint Greater Boston should be regarded as a metropolitan unit of 2,000,000 persons, Regarded merely as a political unit, Boston has a population of less than 1,000,000, but as a geographical center of population, the larger figure is the significant one from the viewpoint of commerce and industry, Harriman pointed out.

He does not regard it as essential that there be a merger of political identity among the communities of the metropolitan district, but insists that the census department should regard the metropolitan district as a census unit.

Passing to the shipping rate problem, Harriman declared that the maritime association of the Chamber of Commerce has been unable to get any recognition for Boston from the Interstate Commerce Commission in its petition for a proper rate differential, but has now appealed to the United States Shipping Board.

BOOSTS SOUTH SHORE

"Developing the new 30-foot channel in Dorchester bay is another move toward putting Boston ahead as a seaport," he said. "That will open up the way for industries on the South Shore. The survey by army engineers will be finished in about a year and if the necessary funds are then appropriated that side of the harbor can be developed to correspond with the admirable development to the north in the Mystic river."

RESCUE 2 IN 19-HOUR SEA BATTLE

Can a Girl Have Too Much Feminine Appeal?

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Nancy Deane, golden haired, dark eyed, has lived all her life with the O'Days in Worcester. For two years she has worked in a lunchroom to help. There she meets John Blair who invites her to go to the circus. Nancy loses her job and learns she is really the granddaughter of the rich Montgomery Deanes of Boston and that her mother, Julie Abbott, a circus performer, is coming to town and wants to see the baby she deserted 18 years before. Nancy goes to the show with John and sees Julie drop from a trapeze; she rushes wildly to the hospital where her mother dies telling her she loved her father. Nancy suddenly decides to go to Boston and Blair, whom she has grown to admire, gives her a letter to a college friend who runs a mill there. On the train she meets one Ginger Varden, a slangy up-to-date, good hearted model who takes her to her own boarding house and invites her to share her room. Nancy is shocked at its disorder and doesn't know quite what to think of her companion.

(Now go on with the story.)

CHAPTER 3

SEATED on a bench in the little park, Nancy pulled out the letter John Blair had given her addressed to Howard Westcott, manager of the mills. It read:

"Dear Wess: This will introduce Miss Nancy O'Day, a friend of mine, who wishes to find work in Boston. She intends to take up some stenographic and secretarial work at Burdett at night, but needs to work in the day time.

"I heard you mention, not long ago, that this was your busy season. Perhaps you can find work for Miss O'Day some place in your organization.

"If so, you will greatly oblige your old college friends,

"JOHN BLAIR."

Nancy turned the letter over and over. She read and re-read it half a dozen times. What would Howard Wescott think of her, the girl he had seen in such company last night—a half-drunken brawl of a party, with its screaming, chattering, cigarette-smoking women.

She opened her purse and took stock of her possessions.

The letter to Mr. Wescott.

Nine dollars and twenty-five cents in money.

A chocolate bar, broken.

A compact, some hairpins. The address of Mrs. Sweeney, a friend of the O'Days, on Newton st.

The $9.25 represented all that stood between Nancy and the world. This would have to keep her going until her first payday—and she didn't even have a job.

"Sitting here thinking about it won't help," she said to herself.

With a gesture of determination, she jammed her belongings into her purse and decided that right then and there she would start for the mill.

It seemed hours before she reached the mill; before she stopped before Employment office to the left."

Her eyes fastened on the big black and gold sign, she could hear the hum of machinery.

"Employment office to the left." She couldn't pull that door open. She was hesitant, nervous, frightened. And though she didn't think about it right then, she was hungry. She walked to the end of the block not knowing what she would do next. Then she started scolding herself, oblivious to anyone on the street.

"Nancy O'Day, you're a little coward. Open that door. Walk in. Present your letter and get a job. If you don't do that you'll starve and be a disgrace to Mud and Darry, and they're the dearest friends you have in the world. Besides they need your help. They're depending on you."

Mud and Darry O'Day!

Nancy's eyes were wet now.

"Stop, Nancy O'Day. Will you stop that crying!"

She gritted her teeth and made a bee line for the door, grabbed the handle and fairly ran up the steps straight into the arms of a pleasant faced woman with gray hair parted in the middle.

Nancy thought she looked a little like Mrs. O'Day, only younger.

"Well, well, well," the woman

Haverhill, July 24.—A vain effort to revive his mother, who had walked into the Merrimac river to the rear of her home while suffering from depression, was made today by Daniel Santarelli, 18, of River st.

He helped another boy drag the body from the river and then worked frantically with the prone method to resuscitate her. The medical examiner later said she was dead when taken ashore.

LAST WEEK FOR 'GANG' ENTRIES

The end is in sight.

Only four more days after today and then the Boston Evening American's "Our Gang" resemblance contest ends.

It will end at midnight next Saturday, so far as entries are concerned, but will begin then, so far as the selection of the winner goes.

So get out your snapshots and photographs, kiddies, and send them in without delay if you wish to win that grand prize of a three-month trip to California, with a salary of $100 a week during that time while acting in real "Our Gang" comedies. Round trip expenses to California of your parents are included in first prize award.

The six New England children who most closely resemble the principals in "Our Gang" will be candidates for first prize. These six will be selected by a board of judges during a personal appearance at Loew's Orpheum Theater next week.

TO MAKE LOCAL COMEDY

They are to appear in six different groups, and the Boston Evening American will announce later when each group will appear for the judges to look them over. All the children who think they look like "Mary Ann" will appear at one time, all those that think they look like "Wheezer" at another, etc., until one "double" of each of "Our Gang" has been chosen.

These six will form the cast of principles in a local "Our Gang" comedy, to be filmed in Boston, while all other children entered will be invited to take part as "extras." This film will be shown at the Orpheum.

When midnight strikes next Saturday, entries will close, so get busy NOW if you wish to enter.

"I am entering my little girl Dorothy, who looks a lot like Jean Darling," writes Mrs. Helene M. Curtis of Dorchester. "She is a lot like the kiddies in 'Our Gang' comedies; she can't think of enough mischief to get into. We call her 'Peck's Bad Girl.'"

Mrs. Lila E. Kuell of Manchester writes:

I am entering two of my little girls, Clara and Olive, in your movie contest, one as "Mary" and the other as "Jean Darling" and I think you will agree with me as to their resemblance to the "Our Gang" girls. I have been urged by several friends to enter both and trust they will be among the fortunate ones.

MORE LETTERS

Mrs. Mary Acton of South Boston writes:

My friends and the chums of my little girl persuaded me to send in her picture for the contest. They all think she looks like "Jean Darling."

Mrs. W. T. Bailey, a fond grandmother, of North Main st., Concord, N. H., writes:

"Many times as I have watched 'Our Gang' at the theater I have remarked how much our little granddaughter looks like 'Mary'—and then this contest opens. The resemblance to us has been most striking, and so we are pleased to send her picture."

Mrs. Ray Greenhalg of Blackstone, wrote:

"I am sending a photograph of my little girl Alice and my boy Billie. Alice is seven, and can sing and dance fairly good. We think she looks just like 'Mary,' of 'Our Gang.' Billie is not quite five. He is good natured, and will mix with anybody. All our neighbors think he looks like 'Big Boy,' but we think he looks like 'Wheezer.'"

ADDED TO ENTRY LIST

Recent entries include:

Francis Mullins, Roxbury; Charlotte McDonald, Salem; Sylvia Crystal, Dorchester; Girard A. Hilsinger, Arlington; Dorothy McEachern, Boston; Rita Shaughnessy, Dor-

LIFESAVERS FIND LOST MEN OFF GLOUCESTER

Lost in a fog and rain, a Haverhill barber and a Groveland auto salesman were rescued from a motorboat five miles off Cape Ann, near Gloucester, after 19 hours of harrowing vigil, by the life-savers of the Plum Island station.

The two men, Chester Howe of 143 Broadway, Haverhill, better known as "Chet," one of the shoe city's leading barbers, and Sherman E. Pike of 10 Common Hill rd., Groveland, were on a fishing trip when disaster overtook them. As the two explained it to the life savers, the rain dampened their motor so that it stalled and left them stranded.

Howe, with his wife and daughter, Barbara, three, and Pike, with Mrs. Pike and five-year-old Marylynn, went to Grape Island, opposite Ipswich Bluff, to spend the weekend.

Leaving their wives and daughters at the island hotel, the two men started out at 1 p. m. Sunday on a fishing trip. Five miles off Cape Ann their motor stalled when the drenching rain came down.

The motor boat was rapidly filling with water so the pair quickly threw overboard the few fish they had caught, and their bait, and used the bait can to bail out the boat.

Ashore their wives became alarmed at their continued absence and the Plum Island life saving station was notified. The life savers put out, but the fog was so dense that they were unable to find trace of the men Sunday night. They made a second trip later and rescued the men.

MEARS SAYS TRIP AROUND WORLD HAS WOVEN BONDS OF KINSHIP

ONE WAY TO PROMOTE PEACE

JOHN HENRY MEARS.

(Written exclusively for the New York American, copyright, 1928, in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, South America and Cuba by the New York American, Inc. Reproduction in whole or in part absolutely prohibited, and violation of copyright will be vigorously prosecuted.)

Distributed by Universal Service.

New York, July 24—Well, my race is over and the victory won. I started out to establish a new record for the fastest travel around the world, and I did. My time was twenty-three days, fifteen hours, twenty-one minutes and three seconds, according to official records.

And now, looking back over the trip, the question arises in my mind, what good was achieved, if any?

Sitting here in my comfortable suite at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, it seems almost impossible to realize that little more than a week ago I was flying with my good pilot, Charles E. Gollyer, over Europe, Siberia, China, and Japan; that I was seeing the remotest parts of the world, and being greeted and banqueted by peoples of whom this side of the world knows so little.

I can recall any number of minor incidents which happened to us in those far lands, just as though they had occurred yesterday, right here. When we landed in Chita, Siberia, for instance, we were very hungry. That was nothing new to us, because we feared the strange foods which were heaped upon us every where we went. Sickness would have proven fatal to our objective.

We tried to make ourselves explicit to the good people of Chita who had gathered to greet us that all we desired were some sandwiches. We felt we could take a chance on this much, at any rate. None of them spoke English, but they seemed to understand, and after we had finished assuaging the searching of our plane, the City of New York, we were beckoned to enter a small limousine, nearby the rough flying field.

Spread out before us there was the most elaborate meal even a king might expect, and every article on the table was strange to us. We couldn't eat it; yet we couldn't refuse such generosity, so we compromised by requesting that it be wrapped up so that we could take it along with us. We flew off from Chita with our pockets full of what probably was excellent food, and our stomachs terribly empty.

Further back, in Berlin, the Soviet officials, after courteously granting us passports for our trip over Russia, also granted us permission to break the seal of our camera when we landed in Moscow. We did so, and, on arrival there, that they had affixed a second seal, and we had permission to take this one. As a result, we took no pictures over Russia or Siberia.

The Chinese were not so diplomatic. Reaching the frontier of China, we were frankly warned that to use the camera would mean immediate arrest, and the shattering of our hopes.

These incidents, and hundreds of others which I have no space at present, are, as I say, as clear in my mind now as though they had occurred yesterday. And the thought that occurs to me is this:

My race has brought me closer to the rest of the world than I ever dreamed I could be. And it has given me a better understanding of those countries, and a friendlier feeling for their people.

My trip, of course, was that of a pioneer in quick travel. But once the rest of the world adopts quicker methods of travel, such as my trip demonstrated could easily be achieved, then—a question:

The whole world is akin. With distance eliminated, won't that kinship have a prominent end to world strife, and a general advancement toward that utopia of universal peace and brotherly love for which we are all striving?

If my race around the world has helped along that line, then I think it has achieved—well, something, anyway.

Many Send in 'Oaky' Turtle Solutions

Well—if "Sleepyhead Oaky," the entombed turtle, had as many letters years ago advising methods of getting out of a log as he has received thus far theorizing on how he got in, he might never have become famous.

The seven-inch Florida reptile, as you will remember if you have been awake in the last week, was found in the center of a three-ton log of live oak when it was being cut to take its place in the reconstructed U. S. frigate Constitution.

"Sleepyhead Oaky," as part as a flapper, has been adopted as "Old Ironsides'" mascot, but there is mystery as to how the turtle got into the log and lived there for any or all the 73 years the log was under water, being conditioned, in a Florida lake.

Therefore, the Boston Evening American offers $10 for the best letter explaining how the reptile might have attained its strange home.

James Barre of 47 North Bayfield rd., Quincy, thinks he has the solution—and it seemingly explains everything in one way.

James says:

"Sleepyhead Oaky," when a baby, entered the log by way of a sinus running through the center of the log. He subsisted on the percolation of animal matter and on the wood in which he was encased, thus making room for himself as he grew.

But Charles W. Bayer of Amory st., Roxbury, has a more facetious idea. He writes:

No mystery at all as to how the turtle got into this piece of timber. In the first place a borer worm entered the wood. When it was placed in the water, the timber tipped over, causing the worm to "turn turtle." Then he lived happily for 73 years. Any seafaring man ought to know that.

On the other hand, Eileen O'Neil of 62 Lisa st., Somerville, wrote a ballad to "Sleepyhead Oaky," and Joseph Deforge of 7 Lafayette pk., Roxbury, wrote "Oaky's" imaginative "Log."

Write your conception.

The judges of the letters will be Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, commandant of the Boston Navy Yard; Lieut. John Lord, U. S. N., in charge of the Constitution reconstruction work, and Park Commissioner William P. Long. Address your letters to "Sleepyhead Oaky," Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

HAINES PLAYS IN NEW ROLE AT STATE

William Haines abandons his familiar role of a wise-cracking athlete and portrays an entirely different type of character in his latest photoplay, "Telling the World," on view at Loew's State this week. Haines, the hero, is a daring, reckless reporter; a charming dancer is the heroine. The boy gets his job on a big metropolitan daily by tricking the editor, but he makes good and is instrumental in exposing a murder. His fall in love with one of the dancers and follows her when she goes with a show troupe on a tour of the Orient.

William Haines

How she is captured by Chinese bandits and about to be beheaded; how she is saved and the boy proclaimed the greatest newspaper man in the world, makes a picture that is not a little exciting.

"Telling the World" is another screen triumph for William Haines. Anita Page, a new screen discovery, plays the leading feminine role. Sam Wood directed. The cast includes Bert Roach, Polly Moran, Frank Currier, Eileen Percy and others.

The stage fare includes the Royal Welsh Gleemen, famous male chorus, and also Charlie Althoff, billed as the "Yankee Fiddler."

'TENDERLOIN' A 'THRILLER'

By LEO GAFFNEY

"Tenderloin," the latest development in the syllabic cinema, is melodrama with the lid off.

At the Washington St. Olympia and at the Fenway, where it is now both visible and audible, there is more of fight, fire and flood than the combined shockers of all 10-20-30 time.

For most eight eventful chapters it pounds along, full of such things as thugs with ugly mugs, center shots of crime, a tortured hero and heroine combination, police raids and, finally, crooks going straight, and all coming right through the power of love. An exciting movie, if not exactly a smart one.

Dolores Costello is the girl with the high tension agony and Conrad Nagel is the instrument of kissing to cause tears. Both of them are spurred to a furious pace. Mr. Nagel is forced through more personal discomforts by the way of gang fights than any first class hooligan has a right to expect; while Miss Costello takes more hard than the bumps when a whole forest topples over on her unoffending head.

Even when the fun is the roughest it is always an easy and pleasant distraction to turn aside from the general ructions and admire the melting heroine. Director Michael Curtiz has arranged the lighting, and the costumer has provided so sympathetically that the utmost pictorial grace is imparted to the ever-gorgeous Dolores. Even in the pelting rain it is vitally necessary that Beatrice must never look bedraggled!

How the movie gods of Action must have exulted with "Tenderloin"! Even the title writer suffered no curb, and in the sequences of dialogue he had his own sweet way, for the hardriven players mug: speak like lines as he gave them; neither sparing each other in harsh denunciation or whining on since ing "Sweet Adeline" for the happy ending.

"Tenderloin" may have its faults as drama, but no one can say that it does not try hard. The injection of sound in the motion pictures is a remarkable novelty, and the public is delightedly gobbling up the thing that is different.

FOX BUYS POLI CHAIN OF THEATERS

New York, July 24 — The Poli chain of motion picture theaters in New England has been purchased outright by the Fox Theaters Corporation for $26,000,000, according to an announcement by William Fox, president of the organization.

The chain, which includes twenty theaters in leading New England towns, has an aggregate seating capacity of 45,000 persons. A budget of $1,000,000 has been set aside by the Fox Corporation, according to Mr. Fox, to completely renovate all the houses and modernize them, particularly with regard to the installation of movietone projection apparatus.

The Poli chain was the largest privately owned theater circuit in America. It was held outright and operated successfully for thirty years by Sylvester Z. Poli, who now is 68 years old.

The chain now becomes a part of the Fox organization, which controls theaters from the Atlantic to the Pacific, including the recently acquired $100,000,000 West Coast Theaters, Inc. It also operates a $50,000,000 studio in Hollywood.

The theaters acquired by the Fox Corporation include the Capitol and Palace in Hartford, Ct.; the Hyperion, Bijou and Palace in New Haven; the East Main Street and West Main Street in Meriden; The Strand and Palace in Waterbury; the Palace, Poli, Majestic, Lyric and two others in Bridgeport; the Broadway Street in Norwich; the Palace in Springfield, Mass., and the Plaza, Poli and Palace in Worcester, Mass.

ARREST NEAR IN SHOOTING

The arrest of a 20-year-old youth, whose identity is known to the police, is expected hourly in connection with the mysterious shooting of Mrs. Carrie Galdi, who was killed last Friday while knitting in her home at 19 Webster ave., East Boston. The youth will be charged with manslaughter.

According to the police, the youth disappeared shortly after learning of Mrs Galdi's death and threw a 22-calibre rifle into the harbor as he fled.

The police have learned that the youth was engaged in target practice in Sumner st., firing at bottles on a pile of lumber, when one of the bullets went wild and was deflected through a screen and curtain into Mrs. Galdi's back.

An effort to recover the rifle from the harbor will be made by a diver, working upon instructions of the police.

The police not only know where to find the youth, but his companion, but also know who his companion at the time of the shooting was.

Inspector John Hennessey and Sergt. Andrew Hurley of East Boston have worked on the case since Mrs. Galdi's death.

Scott Furriers, Inc., will on or about August 1 open a new store in Hartford, which will be the largest fur store in Connecticut and second only in size to the Boston store.

Coincidental with this announcement today, came the news of an annual fur sale, and the further news that because of the vast increase in business the present Boston store has opened another large floor until it has 10,000 feet of selling space, making it the largest fur store in New England.

This phenomenal growth of the company is due to newspaper advertising campaigns, backed by the Unique Fur Club, and other features based on the policy of giving the public "a little more than a square deal," according to the general manager, Henry Yosell.

"The new store, which will be opened at Hartford, is simply an indication of our growth," said Yosell. "This growth is based on several factors. First we have spent a quarter-of-a-million dollars in newspaper advertising and right now we are planning to increase our newspaper advertising. That advertising has attracted customers, there is no doubt about that.

"The second factor is the Unique Fur Club, which customers join. This is simply a means of allowing a person to purchase a fur coat and distributing the cost of it over as long a period of time as may be necessary.

"The third factor is our policy of giving the customer a little more than a square deal. Our merchandise is quality merchandise and because of our tremendous volume we can offer fur coats which is our only line of merchandise—at surprisingly low prices."

SHEARER STARS IN FILM AT ORPHEUM

Norma Shearer's latest starring picture, "The Actress," based on Pinero's famous stage play, "Trelawney of the Wells," is the main film attraction at Loew's Orpheum this week. Assisting Miss Shearer is a capable cast including Ralph Forbes, Owen Moore, Gwen Lee, O. P. Heggie and Roy D'Arcy.

The story concerns an English actress, a member of the troupe of the stock company at the Wells Theater. She falls in love with the son of the fierce Sir William Gower, goes to live at his home during the period of the engagement and eventually returns to poverty and pathos of the stage, only to rise at last to the heights.

Freeborn's Follies is the headline vaudeville act this week. It is a tabloid musical comedy, elaborately staged and presented by a talented group of entertainers led by Gomez and Winona and the "six dancing rockets."

Art Gilham, "the whispering pianist" who became popular through his radio and recording achievements, is also featured with a number of good selections. Hawthorne and Cooke, favorite comedians, furnish the bulk of the comedy this week.

GAMBLERS FOILED BY N.Y. BOARD

By JACK CONWAY

New York, July 24—Chairman James J. Farley of the New York Athletic Commission told this writer today that extraordinary precautions will be taken to prevent Broadway's sure-thing gamblers from tampering with the officials who will render the decision when Gene Tunney defends his world's heavyweight championship against Tom Heeney in a 15-round bout at the Yankee Stadium on Thursday night.

"There will not be any chance of the crooked gamblers having any say in the decision of the Tunney-Heeney bout," declared Farley with great force. "Commissioners Muldoon, Brower and myself will not make the final selection of officials known until the rival heavyweights enter the ring."

"Our plan calls for a number of judges and referees to be notified at 8 p. m. on Thursday afternoon that they have been ordered to report at the Yankee stadium. I shall call the various officials from my personal telephone so as to prevent any leak at the office of the commission.

"The officials for the champion-ship bout will not be named until 10 p. m. This will prevent anybody tampering with them. I believe New York State has a fine lot of judges and referees, but I recognize the frailties of human nature, and Kings Tops is [illegible]

Gilleland Benefit Baseball Game Tonight

Athletic night will be held at the Medford High School Field this evening, the proceeds of which will be contributed to the fund for the widow and two children of Francis J. Gilleland, Medford patrolman, recently slain on duty.

Already the sale of tickets for the occasion has totalled close to $5000 and the committee is assured of great success.

A week ago a benefit game was staged between the North Medford and West Medford A. A. teams and the proceeds from that game will also swell the fund total.

A ball game is the feature attraction of the affair at Medford tonight.

Shut Out in Hurdles Joins Olympic Crew

Amstordam, July 24 (AP)—Ross Nichols, Stanford hurdler who was shut out in the Olympic final trials, has gained a place on the team at last, but not as a timber-topper. He has been taken on the crew of the eight-mater yacht "Babe," owned by O. H. Churchill of Los Angeles, which is entered in the Olympic regatta.

"Perhaps I can show now that as a hurdler I'm a good sailor," Nichols said

HELEN WINS IN LOVE SETS

Manchester-by-the-Sea, July 24 (INS)—Miss Helen Wills, "Queen of the Tennis World," scored a love-set victory over Miss Louise Ieelin of New Rochelle, N. Y., 6—0, 6—0, in the second round of the Essex County club annual invitation tournament.

When she got the word to serve at the start of the match, a smile crossed the face of the world's premier woman tennis player as she bowed slightly to the gallery and shot the first ball. Thereafter, until the second game of the last set, Miss Wills' countenance was set firm.

In this game, however, Miss Ieelin sent a ball to the set, and it dropped just inside, so close that Miss Wills was unable to handle it. Miss Wills with a smile acknowledged the neat play of Miss Ieelin.

It was an easy win for the Californian. The point score tells the whole story in a nutshell:

First set:

Wills	4	4	4	4	4	6	—6
Ieelin	0	0	1	0	1	3	—4

Second set:

Wills	4	5	4	4	4	6	—6
Ieelin	0	3	0	1	0	4	—4

If Miss Wills defeats Mrs. William M. Sheddon, Boston, in the third round this afternoon, she will meet Miss Sarah Palfrey, the 14-year-old Boston girl wonder, tomorrow, a match that will be unique in tennis annals.

Today Miss Palfrey easily disposed of Mrs. G. A. Harding of Cambridge, 6—1, 6—0. Two other third round matches resulted as follows: Miss Edith Cross, San Francisco, defeated Miss Lee Palfrey, another of the Palfrey sisters, 8—6, 6—3, 6—0.

Mrs. William Endicott, Boston, defeated Miss Carolyn Gamble, San Francisco, 6—3, 6—4.

U. S. "Specs" Must Have Sailed Early

Amsterdam, July 24—Friends and relatives of members of the team who are here to view the games are indignant over the fact that reservations ordered in advance by the American committee have not been reserved.

Dutch Olympic officials claim the stadium has been sold out. An investigation is now under way, at the instigation of the American committee, to determine whether or not any of the tickets have fallen into the hands of speculators.

LACOSTE TAKES RAP AT U.S.L.T.A.

Auteuil, France, July 24 (AP)—Rene Lacoste had decided he will not defend his American tennis championship this year and will not proceed to the United States with the remainder of the French team next month, he announced today.

Lacoste insisted the decision was not prompted by the France-American controversy concerning the barring of Big Bill Tilden from the Davis Cup challenge round. He said he made up his mind several weeks ago.

The general interpretation of Lacoste's action at the stadium here where Lacoste and Jean Borotra were playing a match in the interclub championships was that France was taking a shot back at the United States Lawn Tennis Association for the disqualification of Tilden which the French consider has practically wrecked interest in the challenge round for the Davis [illegible]

YACHT NINA WINS RACE

Santander, Spain, July 24 (AP)—The American yacht Nina, contesting for the cup offered by the Queen of Spain for a race of small yachts from New York to this port, came into harbor at 3.30 p. m. today

A fleet of other vessels escorted the winner, which flew the flag of Spain from her foremast.

The Nina crossed the finishing line at the entrance to the harbor at 2.58.52.

As she came down through the long lane of gaily decorated craft that had gathered here to greet the American boats, she passed the yacht of the King of Spain. Spanish royalty was a bit surprised, but was nevertheless pleased by the vociferous greeting given to King Alfonso from the student crew of the Nina. MORRIS WILL ATTEMPT TO HOLD YANKEES

By NICK FLATLEY

HAVING smeared the champion Yankees with neatness and dispatch in the first game of their abbreviated series, the courageous Red Sox are out to repeat the performance this p. m.

Big Ed Morris, ace of the Carrigan staff, is down to do the twirling and if the giant Alabaman is as effective as usual, the natives will have the unusual distinction of having made a clean sweep of a series with the Hugmen.

No other club in the circuit causes the champions as much trouble as the Fenway troupe, and despite the big lead they have in the race, the visitors are beginning to get hot under the collar over the way our heroes treat them.

Consequently, they are so anxious to win today that they will use Herb Pennock, their best mound bet, in an effort to get an even break.

ANOTHER large week-day gathering will be present. More than 18,000 were at the Monday matinee and at least as many are due this p. m., proving that Babe Ruth is still the greatest attraction the game has ever known.

The mighty Bambino came through with his fortieth home run yesterday, the longest drive ever seen at the park, the scene of his initial triumphs, and he will do his best to park a few more into the stands today.

EXCEPT for Ruth's drive, which cleared the left field fence down near the flagpole, the Yanks could do little with Danny McFayden, bespectacled Somerville youth.

The local flinger doesn't have much success against the other clubs but he is always a thorn in the side of the champions, which indicates that he has the makings of great [illegible]

PICK OLYMPIC TANK TEAM

Haarlem, Holland, July 24 (AP)—Johnny Weismuller beat his winning time of 59 seconds at the Paris Olympics in the 100-meter event today, swimming the distance in practice in 57 4-10 seconds. He was clocked by two watches.

As a result of trials this morning prior to Weismuller's practice performances, the American relay team was announced as follows, together with times for the 100-meter test:

George Kojac, Boys' Club, New York, 2 minutes, 19 1-10 seconds
Austin Clapp, Hollywood Cal., 21 7-10
Walter Laufer, Lake Shore A. C., Chicago, 8.34
Jack J. Young, New York A. C., 2.25
Paul Samson Alamson, Mich., 2.25 3-10.
Weismuller is the sixth man.

He did not try out today because it is conceded he can do 2.15. Another trial is to be held a couple of days before the Olympic race to pick the four or three six who will actually start.

Taylor stated that the American relay team is likely to clip 20 or 30 seconds from the Paris Olympics relay time of 9 44 4-10, as the American quartet probably will average [illegible]

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

SANCTIONED by the United States and Massachusetts Golf Associations, the William Randolph Hearst tournament at the Blue Hill Country Club promises to promote new and much needed interest among the younger golfers. Placing the age limit from 15 to 19 was a step in the right direction, one which will, in all probability, be adopted by the M. G. A. next season.

The William Randolph Hearst tournament will start with an 18 hole qualifying round on August 6 and the 16 low scorers will qualify for match play. Although the Blue Hill Country Club offers a severe test of golf, the juniors will negotiate this course in as respectable figures as the older golfers have in open tournaments.

Pres. George H. Capen, of the Blue Hill Country Club, lost no time in putting his stamp of approval on the William Randolph Hearst tournament. George H. Capen is one of the most enthusiastic devotees of the game of golf in this section. Although the juniors have always been most cordially welcomed, the Blue Hill Country Club reception will be particularly sincere and hearty.

Regardless of the outcome of the first match in England, the announcement that Walter Hagen and Archie Compston were to start their new hostilities at the Sandy Burr Country Club started many predictions of a Hagen victory. But the article of golf that Compston has been shooting in his various exhibition matches in this vicinity has a large extent curtailed some of the enthusiasms as to Hagen's chances.

Archie Compston has been racing around our courses in the 60's. He was 68 at the North Shore Golf and Country Club and 68 at Pine Brook Valley, on his first look at these courses. There is no denying that Compston is "hot," and he should be conceded an easy winner were he playing anyone but Walter Hagen. The match promises to be a thriller along with producing some of the most spectacular golf ever seen here.

Walter Hagen and Archie Compston play a brand of golf which is a sure fire hit with the galleries. They never resort to playing safe. Instead, they will take more than their share of chances, a style of golf which is the style of play that is always most enthusiastically received by the gallery.

A C. Roche of Bear Hill stepped around the Charles River Country Club in 71 blows on Sunday while playing with Les Cottrell and Merrill Lord. Roche is coming along fast as a golfer, and should try his luck at one of the championship

TRACK JAMMED BY OLYMPIC ATHLETES

By LAWSON ROBERTSON
Head Coach U. S. Olympic Team

Amsterdam, July 24—Training conditions for the Olympics continue to be as bad as they can well be, the only thing to be thankful for here being the continuance of the dry sunny weather.

Every day the practice track is becoming more and more jammed. The fact that women are competing in track and field events for the first time in the Olympic games, adds to the congestion.

Women runners, jumpers and discus throwers from the United States, Canada and Japan are taking their chances with male competitors for use of the track and field, and it is hard to sort out the conglomeration of men and women from the various nations who are trying to reach their best form.

However, one or two bright spots have developed for the United States. Morgan Taylor did a quarter mile over a flight of three hurdles in 55 and 9-10 seconds today.

There has also been a good 800-meter trial won by Earl Fuller over a soft track in 1.57, with Ray Watson three yards behind—a very good performance under the circumstances.

John Zola, backed by Wisconsin University, arrived today, having cabled his entry for the 10,000 meters, but it was too late to be accepted, so he will compete in some of the big continental meets.

Dr. Peltzer, famous German runner, has entered in the 800-meter and 1,500-meter events, but I am told he will compete in only one of these events.

Cup, held by France for the first time in history.

Lacoste a father volunteered the information that Rene was greatly upset at the disqualification of Tilden, who deprives the French star of what he says is another chance to show his superiority over American ranking No. 1 player.

"I am rather sorry at Rene's decision," said his father. "I would have liked to have him bring the American championship cup back to France after his third victory it it could be achieved."

All Rene would says was "We would rather lose the Davis cup than retain it when there might be some excuse because of Tilden's absence."

U. S. L. T. A. Officials Are Disappointed

New York, July 24 (AP) — The news that Rene Lacoste will no defend his United States championship was naturally learned with disappointment today at the offices of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Lacoste, as the champion, was counted upon to be the main drawing card in the title tournament which is scheduled to begin September 25 at the West Side Tennis club at Forest Hill.

The first round draw for the champ ionship between Lacoste and Bill Tilden last September drew a capacity crowd and a big gate.

Crescent A. C. to Hold Weekly Shows

Lou Penney, matchmaker for the Crescent A. C. of Lynn, will stage weekly Monday night shows at General Electric Field throughout the rest of the summer starting next Monday night.

For next Monday night he has signed Johnny Moore of the North End, who gave Chick Suggs a whalloping two weeks ago, to battle Johnny Kid Adams of Lawrence. No title will be at stake, but patrons of the up-and-coming Lynn club are in for a real fight.

Frank Baldi, a Lynn welterweight, is to meet Tom Smoot of South Boston in the eight-round semi-final bout. Smoot has won 16 consecutive victories since becoming a professional, and will give Baldi the stiffest test of his career.

Champions in Revere Title Race

Six riders will comprise the field in the first championship bike race of the season Saturday night at Revere. Present, past and coming champions will face the starter, all with one thought—to win and climb higher in the race for the crown.

Franco Georgetti, holder of the title, is at present leading in points scored, but he is closely pressed by Franklin Keenan, the Revere boy, who is hot after the crown this year. Keenan, a victory Saturday night, can climb within a few points of Georgetti.

Opposing these two will be George Chapman, six times holder of the championship. Victor Hopkins, titliet two years ago, Francesco Zucchetti, the Italian who won the Golden Wheel last week, and Larry Jaffrey, New York.

Nat Butler is lining up an attractive preliminary card, including the usual races for amateur and so have taken all possible precautions in regard to the title bout.

"If TUNNEY and Heeney will each receive a fair deal. The fact that Heeney is a foreign heavyweight will not count against him. If he scores the most points, he will get the decision."

Farley's statement recalled to my mind an interview I had at Albany with Gov. Alfred E. Smith a year and a half ago. The conversation turned to boxing.

"Personally I am not greatly interested in boxing," said the Governor, "but when two men get into the ring to box I insist that the better man receive the decision. I will not tolerate any crookedness in connection with a boxing match.

"I shall remove anybody from office who is mixed up in anything of the kind. I do not care whether the guilty party is a member of the commission or a minor official. They must shoot straight."

The odds of 4 to 1 and even 5 to 1 on Tunney are what have caused Farley to act. He realizes it is a perfect spot for a big betting cleanup and he intends to block any possible wrong doing.

TO date there has been very little real money bet on the outcome of the tussle. The so-called big bets have been mostly ballyhoo.

The lack of betting is due to the fact that most of the wise men like Tunney's chances. They figure he is a cinch to win over the plodding Heeney.

The Heeney backers base their hopes chiefly on the fact that Tunney has fallen into a state of pugilistic decay due to inactivity. They admit that Gene has exercised regularly, but they argue it takes real fights to keep a man in the razor edge condition necessary to battle a tough fellow like Heeney.

I find that interest in the heavyweight battle is at a low ebb in New York.

There is not a chance of Rickard realizing his original dream of a gate of $1,500,000.

I DO not believed the net gate will go much more than $750,000 to $800,000. There are those who even say the gross gate will not top a million.

The gross gate does not mean so much this year as the 25 per cent federal tax and the 5 per cent State tax grabs most of the top.

It does not look as though the bout will net Rickard any profit. He is merely staging a show to enrich Tunney and Heeney.

Tunney and Heeney both lack the color necessary to put a kick into a big fight.

Dempsey against Sharkey would draw $1,500,000 without any trouble, as both men have crowd appeal.

The old Tiger's decision to remain in retirement makes such a match impossible. The only thing that will cause Dempsey to return to the ring is a Heeney victory on Thursday night.

Dempsey would like to see Tom win, as he figures he could tip him over. A slow moving, wide open fighter like Heeney would be made to order for the former champion.

MR. BOSTON By Jack Conway

NEW YORK, July 24—Mr. Boston was resting against one of those orange juice bars on Broadway.

Even though it was well past the breakfast hour in most towns, Broadway still had a very deserted appearance. One can always find more people parading along Broadway at 8 a. m. than at 9 a. m. This is still a night town despite the 18th amendment and alleged 2 a. m closings.

"I find that fight fans are not going wild despite the fact that Gene Tunney is going to defend his precious world's heavyweight champion ship against Tom Heeney at the Yankee stadium on Thursday night, Mr. Boston whispered to the fellow who was handing out the orange juice.

"Is it true that Rickard has a $500,000 advance sale?" asked Mr Boston as though talking to himself.

The fellow behind the orange juice stand leaned forward.

"I go by the Garden box office every day on my way to lunch," he chirped, "and I have only seen a few people buying tickets. They say though, that there have been heavy ringside orders from the 600 millionaires who own the Garden and also from out-of-town fans."

"It will take more than the 600 millionaires to make this show a financial success," went on Mr. Boston. "Rickard needs a net gate of $900,000 to get from under. I figure the gross gate will top a million but the 25 per cent federal tax and the 5 per cent New York tax mus come out of that."

MR. BOSTON looked the orange juice dispenser right in the eye.

"Do you happen to know Tom Heeney?" queried the veteran.

"Just by sight. He passes my stand here on his way to the Garden."

"Doesn't he ever stop for refreshments?"

"Never at my place. You see, boss, I sell only orange juice. I have often noticed Tom going into that doorway over there. You walk up a flight of stairs and you can get a glass of ale for 50 cents. They tell me Tom likes his ale.

"I often think as I stand here and watch the people going into that doorway over there that I could do a better business if I sold ale instead of orange juice."

"I think you have said something," replied Mr. Boston as he made a mental note of the exact location of the doorway in question.

"You're sure it's good beer they sell in that place?" pressed Mr Boston.

"The best they say."

"I'm glad I stopped for a little orange juice after all. You fellows are always pretty well posted on things."

"I UNDERSTAND Heeney's trainers now only allow him to drink New Zealand tea," went on the orange juice man.

"That is in public," laughed Mr. Boston. "It is not wise to try to cash an old dog new tricks, especially on the eve of a heavyweight championship fight.

"Heeney is not the first fighter who took a glass of ale while training for an important ring job. John L. Sullivan, Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey always drank ale during the early days of their training.

"The coming battle will determine, in a way, whether a water drinker has more fire than a ale sipper. You know Gene doesn't drink anything stronger than water."

"He goes on an orange juice spree now and then," said the fellow behind the counter. "It was vitality made by orange juice that enabled him to get up off the floor at Soldiers Field and win."

"Have it your own way," said Mr. Boston. "I'll admit that Tunney obeys all of the rules. I have known a great many champions who were sold down the public as model athletes, but who shattered all the rules when off by themselves. In the case of Tunney, he lives 100 per cent right. There is not anything of the hypocrite about the former leatherneck."

"Guess that's why some people don't like him," came the voice from behind the counter. "Gene lives his own life and does not try to hand a lot of apple sauce to his public."

"WHO do you think will win the fight?" queried Mr. Boston.

"It's hard to beat an orange juice drinker."

Mr. Boston apparently thought otherwise as he started for the doorway across the street.

Up there the cheerful bartender cried out in greeting:

"Have a little of the same kind of ale that will carry Tom Heeney to victory over Gene Tunney."

It all depends on your point of view.

R. I. Yacht Club Puts Regatta Over

Tunney in Final Workout, Expects K. O. Victory

HEENEY WINDS UP HIS WORK, LEAVES FOR N. Y.

By BILL CORUM

Speculator, N. Y., July 24—Fight experts who came here a week ago to scoff at a champion whose punch was cutting but impotent, remain today to announce that Gene Tunney has a mighty good chance of knocking out Tom Heeney, heavyweight challenger, in the Yankee Stadium, Thursday night.

For the first time in the memory of many of those who have been watching him for years the champion is scowling during his workouts. This chance has come within the past few days, for ten days ago the champion was going through his daily paces with an air almost of indifference.

He would start his right with sort of a smile and apologize to his sparring mates if he landed too hard. That went against the grain of many of the old-timers who were used to seeing sparring mates fed to the champions just as they threw early Christian martyrs to the lions under the jolly old Caesars.

IN the last few workouts came the second great transformation in the heavyweight king during his current campaign, the first, of course, being the mental change that made him just a great big, good-natured pal to almost everybody in town.

Now he has considerable of the killer about him in the manner in which he sets out after Harold Mays and Billy Vidabeck. Both of these lozenge youngsters are the happiest men in town now that the training grind is nearing an end.

Following Friday's workout, Vidabeck was nursing a left optic that was closed over the week-end.

Working out with Harold Mays, Sunday, Tunney had the spectators agog as he chased the boy under a flurry of man-killing rights and lefts.

Gene kept stabbing his left to the face and bringing over a succession of rights that staggered Mays. They would have driven the husky Harold into the canvas had Gene persisted in flinging them, but he let up as quickly as he began and got on the attacks thereafter only in snort spurts.

ALL of which shows that Mr. Tunney realizes that dynamite is the reducing agent for Hard Rock Heeney and that famous right will pack plenty of it when he squares off against the Hard Rock of the Antipodes Thursday night.

Tunney himself expects to win by a knockout, and had the following to say about his chances yesterday:

"I feel in better condition for the coming contest than for either of my fights with Jack Dempsey. With the strong boxing held in New York city, I had an opportunity to train here in the mountains and condition myself to my own complete satisfaction.

"My hands are stronger than they have been in years and, in view of the fact I am confident that I am quicker than I have been in years, or since I began professional boxing, when my hands have not been strong enough to withstand the power of my punches.

Gene Thinks Heeney Best Contender

By GENE TUNNEY

Speculator, N. Y., July 24—Now that Jack Dempsey, according to newspaper accounts, has picked Tom Heeney to win the championship from me at the Yankee Stadium, my own judgment in rating Heeney the foremost contender of the heavyweight fighters is substantiated.

Many boxing writer experts are likewise finding Heeney the prospective winner. I have never underrated Heeney's fistic ability. In all his fights in this country he showed himself to be far superior to the other challengers.

He backs up exceptional ring courage with shoes, range punishment that wears down his opponents. When he fought Jack Sharkey the big Lithuanian came leaping out of his corner and threw a right hand punch that started in his heels.

Heeney took it without even a blink, but instead kept boring straight on into the blond boy's face.

Again in his fights with Jimmy Maloney he took a terrific right hand punch under the heart that Jimmy let go with all he had in him. Heeney apparently was not bothered at all quickly whipped over a hook to the chin that put Maloney out.

Heeney is a hooking puncher. He carves his blows into the body and while a straight hitter is supposed to be more dangerous, yet with his powerful mitt Heeney has hind them they can batter down a bigger fellow, so that when he follows with his right he has his man in distress.

As a defensive fighter Heeney's same boring in style of pushing forward with his head lowered to one side enables him to catch left jabs on the forehead and often he gets in under them with a counter.

Spectators might think him an easy mark for a right cross. But he is really built. Tom has a habit of blocking most of them. Sharkey hit him with one in the first round, but landed few thereafter.

The experts declare that Heeney will crowd me against the ropes and then unleash his professional career, regards his fight with Maloney as most important.

For two years Lamar has been trying to break into the select circle of heavyweights, but until this match was clinched local promoters refused to give him a chance. Now that he has shown his worth, Lamar not only is rated as one of the topnotchers of the local ring going, but he is also given a glowing chance of winning the decision.

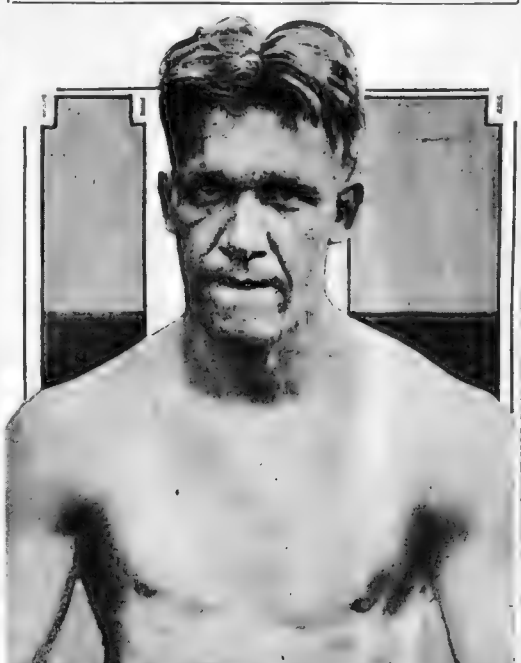
BATTLES MALONEY AT WIGWAM



EX-COLLEGE BOY READY FOR FRAY

Henry Lamar, hard-working heavyweight, faces Jim Maloney in the Argonne show at Braves Field tonight. Henry had a career of study all mapped out. They he decided to alter maps instead.

Maloney and Lamar Meet in Ring Tonight

Facing the most treacherous turn on his fistic path in his battle to regain his place at the top of the heavyweight heap, Jim Maloney will try to take the measure of Henry Lamar, scion of Virginian society, when they clash in the 10-round feature bout of the Argonne A. A. at Braves Field tonight.

This clash between local giants was postponed from last night.

And the 24-hour respite granted both fighters has served only to increase interest in the event, by far the most popular heavyweight tussle called in the Hub in many months. While Maloney exhibited more real fighting spirit ability to take it as well as an all round improvement in his fistic work in his first comeback battle against Jack De Mave, nevertheless, it is feared that the South Boston knockout king has his entire future in the ring in this important conflict.

MALONEY PUNCHING HARDER

And while it is reported that Maloney is punching harder than ever in his career and at the same time looking forward to crushing the upward march of Lamar, close critics of the boxing game still insist that Lamar's crushing left hand will prove an insurmountable obstacle for the South Boston man to hurdle.

They will step on the scales today at the boxing commission's office. It is expected that Maloney will tip the beam at 195 pounds, while Lamar is expected to weigh 198 pounds. This demonstrates the fact that there is little to choose between these men.

Lamar, the Gene Tunney of the New England prize ring as he is regarded by close followers of the game, embarks in his professional career, regards his fight with Maloney as most important.

For two years Lamar has been trying to break into the select circle of heavyweights, but until this match was clinched local promoters refused to give him a chance. Now that he has shown his worth, Lamar not only is rated as one of the topnotchers of the local ring going, but he is also given a glowing chance of winning the decision.

HEENEY WORTHY FOE FOR CHAMP

[illegible] seems to [illegible] Tom Heeney is a fine, [illegible] building [illegible] fighter.

WHEN I remember what Tom Heeney did against Maloney and what he showed on Sunday, I fall into the idea that anybody who thinks that he's a setup for any fighter in the world is wrong—dead wrong.

He's a reasonably fast man [illegible] a smashing way, but [illegible] He swarms over you [illegible] always going in [illegible] kind. I assert that makes [illegible] uncomfortable for any man [illegible]

[illegible] about how a great boxer he is. A snappy jab can halt [illegible] in short order, and I'll agree that it can be done.

But no boxer and no one else can [illegible] who won't be stopped. If [illegible] means me as that kind [illegible] who wants to be handed [illegible] on and, in the general scheme [illegible] is ought to stop [illegible] and jab and back away and [illegible] opponent.

If that Tom Heeney violates the general rule. After he is poked on the [illegible] is something slammed [illegible] he steps in and [illegible]

I'VE fought a lot of fellows in my time and I always found it mighty hard to whip a man who came wading in on me and kept right on wading in even after I banged him a few.

When [illegible] kept crowding, [illegible] adding me some more, [illegible] knocked me off [illegible] I always made up [illegible] that I could get new [illegible] myself.

[illegible] Heeney is that type of fighter. He just goes in at his man [illegible] and bangs him close, keeps close and all the time he is hammering away with a two-fisted attack.

He has several peculiar ways. He goes in one time with head partially [illegible] the next time with his head [illegible] side. The next time on his right side.

[illegible] is tricky, inasmuch as you can't quite figure out how he is going to come in, and, therefore, it [illegible] to anticipate the method of his advance.

Then, though, Heeney is rugged, Heeney is game. He is big enough and heavy enough to have a fighting chance against any man in the world. I've heard so much [illegible] criticism from [illegible] as that I am not going into detailed dispute on that point.

BUT he wasn't any light hitter against Maloney, and the shots I saw him throw in his camp, even though softened by 14-ounce gloves, were no petting party caresses.

Tom Heeney is a faster puncher and a more accurate one, as I view [illegible] than most other fellows give [illegible] for being. He times his punches well.

He has a world of patience, and he does not throw his flails in all directions hoping to get home a lucky [illegible] He crowds in, and not until he gets in close enough to land a punch does he let go.

But as a great help in his favor, [illegible] it means that Heeney won't be wasting any of his strength with wild swings and that he's reasonably sure of clipping his target when he opens fire.

Fellows who have the build of Heeney deserve to be called hard hitters. He's possessed of a pair of powerful legs, that keep him braced well at all times. And his legs are strong enough to enable him to step around out of danger when the going gets a bit tough.

Legs are rated by many as the greatest assets any ringman can have. In which case it can be said that Heeney will carry into battle on Thursday night a pair of legs that have no equal today in the matter of sturdiness.

NO wild swings and no jarring jabs are going to knock him off balance. The only thing that will drop him will be a terrific smash that will have to pulverize his chin before the effect reaches his legs.

I certainly liked the way Heeney sized up in his Sunday workout. I thought he looked like a mighty good fighter, with a great chance against anybody in sight.

When the boys told him that in exhibition Sunday he was fighting pur, Tom he had none of his usual pep and speed, and that he wasn't crowding with his customary swiftness—well, that makes Heeney size up still better.

Heeney is a ringman after my own heart, in the old-do-or-die kind that learns to make a fight out of [illegible] and that punch in his [illegible] to land one, willing from [illegible] to get to it and to the center [illegible] the ring and make it a survival [illegible] the fitter fighter in the way of [illegible] and durability and punching power.

AFTER seeing Heeney I'm firmly of the opinion that no one is going to outgame him, no one is going to show more endurance, and that he'll be standing up and fighting to the limit of his powers so long as the fight lasts.

And let's not forget that a fighting ringman has a chance anytime, anywhere under any circumstances against anybody—if he has the legs to carry him along.

Gene Tunney Master Gloveman—Runyon

By DAMON RUNYON

MISTER GENE TUNNEY is one of the master glovemen of all time, make no error there.

Whatever he may be outside the ring, once he pokes his pompadour through the ropes he is a consummate pugilistic mechanician, [illegible] an artist.

You can't take [illegible] away from him. He demonstrated to me at [illegible] Chicago a year ago in [illegible] that he knows more [illegible] ring and has more self-[illegible] under stress than [illegible] man I ever saw in the ring.

That was when he was knocked down by Jack Lenpsey.

Any veteran follower of the strange boxing dodge will tell you that the real test of a man comes when he hits the canvas.

A fighter may look great to the average observer of these matters, may be a marvelous boxer with wonderful speed, and a terrific punch and the clients may be raving about him, but the veteran sagely shakes his head, and says:

"Yes, he looks good—but I'd like to see him on the floor."

The best looking gladiators I ever saw in the matter of flash were Bombardier Wells, the English heavyweight, and Ruby Goldstein, the pride of the East Side.

They seemed to have everything, as we say at the club, until they got tagged. Then, alas! they looked terrible.

NO one had ever seen Mister Gene Tunney under such stress, had never seen him on the floor. Wherefore, no one knew what he would do, or how he would do it.

He had been seen under quite some fire, it is true, notably in his battles with Harry Greb, and against Erminio Spalla of Italy. He bore up well against the Pittsburgh Windmill, but in the Spalla fight I gathered the impression that Mister Tunney, at one moment, had some thought of taking the top strand.

Meaning that he didn't act as if he just quite cared for the going. Spalla eventually quit in his own corner, but nevertheless a lot of citizens didn't think much of Mister Tunney in that fight.

He at all times, in all his battles seemed to be cautious. His boxing ability was admitted. But he seemed to lack fire. He seemed to lack confidence. Even in his first fight with Dempsey, which he won by as far as [illegible] here to the Battery, he went along with a certain restraint that failed to impress me as considered very strongly.

But any lingering doubt is anyone's mind as to his real ability must have been dissipated in that seventh round at Chicago. He went under a furious attack; he sat there quietly albeit somewhat embarrassed and bewildered, taking the count.

Then he got up, and did the only sensible thing to be done. He retreated, and kept retreating, fighting [illegible] until his head cleared and he had fully recovered his equilibrium.

NINE out of ten fighters—Dempsey himself, for example—would probably have rushed blindly at the man who did the knocking down, trying to clinch or trying to fight in close.

They would have been stung to furys, or would have lost their bearings completely and hurried headlong to sure destruction. I never could understand why Mister Tunney has always insisted that he wasn't quite fazed by the punch because the very fact that he was distressed adds all the more to the [illegible] glory of his achievement in avoiding subsequent damage.

A great fighter, that night, Mister Gene Tunney. A cold craftsman of the Sour Science, stabbing back the onrushing destroyer as methodically as if he were in a gymnasium, moving out of harms way, and turning what seemed to be sure defeat into victory.

I doubt if Mister Tunney will ever again fight as fine a battle as that a classic. When I review that bat

ADD to his boxing ability the fact that Mister Gene Tunney is NEVER out of condition. He is one fighter that I am quite sure is the paragon of private conduct that the pugilistic public likes to believe ALL fighters are. The ONLY one.

I am quite sure that Mister Tunney has no secret vices or dissipations. There are too many around who would love to tell of them if he had. His life in the matter of regularity and abstemiousness is well nigh that of an acolyte.

Now then he is but thirty years old, or about ten years younger than the average pugilist of any experience. Most of them burn themselves out one way and another after they have been in the ring three of four years. Jack Dempsey is an old man in many ways at thirty-three. Mister Tunney is but a budding, blushing youth compared to him.

Thus Mister Tunney has all his strength and vitality unimpaired. He has added vastly to his original store of health by a systematic building up that has extended over a period of several years. He has built up his body; built up his hands. He has so ordered his life that I would say he is about as fit to meet a mere man can arrive. If he still is INTERESTED in his calling, I see no reason why Mister Tunney shouldn't remain heavyweight champion of the world as long as any man that ever held the title.

Periscope! America Decides It

By JOHN KNOX
CHAPTER 24

We have been told by some of our late wars that we did little in the war, that we delayed our entrance into the struggle and that our only contribution was money which should remain a contribution.

There are those among us who proclaim these beliefs—people who should know better if their intellectual attainments were a measure of their intelligence. With a curious suddenness to the system of government and the standard of living which prevails on these conspicuous shores should have us believe that we have done it and sent people across the wide seas to their graves without a thought.

This is not a discussion as to who won the war. Rather it has been an exposition of some of the means by which it was won. That we did not enter it until 1917 is our own affair. It was not a war of our making nor one from which we could benefit. Our final entry was urged by the need to avoid a world-wide disaster rather than any hope or desire of gaining some fruits of victory. The events of 1917 made it that way. We gave of our best, blood and treasure—and all that is sacred with the dead best.

A debt is owed for the men and boys who served and a struggle is required that we defend the memory of their valor from a sordid calumny.

In these chapters I have tried to set forth just a few of the things that [illegible] from this our allies had no [illegible] able to do.

We in America are committed to a doctrine of peace and our civilization is not organized for war. The outstanding result of this policy is that every so often some predatory nation decides that we are ripe to pick and that nation tries to do it. When the emergency descends upon us we are forced to pay for the gaps in our line of guns with the lives of our young men.

In spite of unreadiness for war and the price we have paid in the past for that unreadiness—we are incurable sentimentalists. We propose to believe that a resolution passed by a club of sheltered women in a protected inland town will change the course of history and remake mankind. There are some of us (happily a minority, but a noisy one) who proclaim the belief that if we discard our protection international burglars will be moved in tears to the convert's bench, and that war will vanish from the earth. This country has long since been convinced of the desirability of peace. The pace to begin disarmament is among our splendid enemies.

The tragic picture of 1917 saw England's great fleet holding the German navy to a tight blockade, with the German beaten beyond a shadow of doubt in that quarter. It also saw German submarines ranging the sea at will and sinking merchant ships at a rate which in a few short months at most would have forced England's "victorious" navy to surrender to its "defeated" enemy.

Truly, the balance of power in the Spring of 1914 rested with the Kaiser and his allies.

But there had come into the conflict in 1917 a new element. It was not at first a military force, from the European point of view, but it was a fighting force from the first day of our participation. Our first point of contact with the struggle was through the Navy and it took the form of an attack on Germany's most victorious and threatening force—their submarines. In this story we have portrayed the extent and vigor of this attack by quoting a few of the facts of our anti-submarine warfare. In earlier chapters we quoted the number of vessels Allied and neutral, sunk by the U-boats before the U. S. Navy took up the job of beating them. We gave the figures showing the sinkings month by month after our Navy got into action. The reader will remember how the figures dwindled month by month until in March 1918 not a single vessel fell prey to the U boats. The U boat had been beaten by the U. S. Navy.

From then until the end of the war the German submarine was a negligible factor in the war.

The navy department chart, too detailed to reproduce here, prepared from the general operations chart of the navy department, shows the extent of sea territory covered by our anti-submarine patrol system. Beginning several hundred miles west of the British Isles, we convoyed ships through to England and France and conducted independent patrols over all areas in which submarines were reported. Our areas ran up the Bristol channel, between England and Ireland, along the coast of France from Cherbourg to Bayonne, west again to the Azores Islands and across to and including Gibraltar. In addition to covering the Straits of Gibraltar, we maintained a base at the African port of Bizerta, in French Tunisia, and another at the Island of Corfu, also in the Mediterranean sea. We also established a tight submarine barrage across the mouth of the Adriatic sea in front of Otranto.

While the British grand fleet held the North Sea, we supported them with a squadron of our battleships and also laid a 250-mile mine barrage from Scotland to Norway which closed that exit from the North sea to the German submarines. We kept another squadron of battleships at Bantry bay in the south of Ireland as a guard against a possible raid of German battle cruisers through the English channel and even went as far as the White Sea in the frozen north of Russia, where we maintained a submarine chaser patrol fleet.

I have no record of the merchant tonnage escorted by our navy convoys, but the 2,000,000 men we sent to France were practically all safeguarded through the submarine zone by our patrol and escort ships and nearly half of them were carried over on naval transports. All this was done without the loss of a single American soldier!

The United States Navy was the deciding factor in the World War. It checked the ravages of the submarine and relieved the pressure on the Allied rear. It escorted and carried Pershing's army to France and so increased the Allied superiority of battle craft that the Germans never dared to put to sea until they came out to surrender.

The navy was then and is now our first line of national defense and nothing but the most egregious folly or the blackest treason would permit a step to weaken this life insurance policy which protects the integrity and prosperity of the United States.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
Is it correct for a wife to speak of her husband as "Mr. ——"?
C. M.

A WIFE speaks of her husband as "Mr. ——" to servants and tradespeople. To other people she refers to him either by his Christian name or as "my husband." To close friends she naturally refers to him by his Christian name. To the "in-between" she uses either form—the one she considers the most appropriate. If in doubt, "my husband" is the safer thing to say.

Other nations often poke fun at an American woman when she refers to her husband as "Mr. ——." They maintain that it is just as consistent to refer to a daughter as "Miss" or a son as "Mr. ——." As I see it, the use of the husband's name is a matter of personal taste. French husband and wives always, I believe, refer to each other as "my wife" and "my husband."

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
Some girls told me that it is impolite for a boy to leave a girl when he brings her home at night without kissing her. Perhaps I am ancient in my ideas but I do not care to kiss all the boys I go with even if they do insist. Please tell me if it is modern etiquette for a boy to kiss a girl at the time I mentioned.
J.

HERE'S modernism — supermodernism! Don't let your frocks spoof you. Hold on to your self-respect, and your common sense. They are "grand" guiding qualities.

SHEFFORD CREAM CHEESE

Martha Lee Tells of Ice Cream Facts

By MARTHA LEE

SINCE they tell us that we consume between two and three million gallons of commercial ice cream each year, much of which is eaten by our children, the question whether this food product is good for our little folks is surely worthy of careful consideration.

Martha Lee

Mothers appear to be divided into two classes — those who look upon ice cream as a nourishing pudding in more tempting form, and those who feel guilty about indulging their precious ones at the corner drug store because they do not know just what goes into the composition of the cream.

It may ease these mothers' worries considerably to know that all nutrition authorities appear to agree that properly prepared ice cream is an excellent food for children. For very small children, they do not advocate ice cream oftener than once a week and only in moderate quantities on account of the extreme coldness and they also suggest that ice cream should be eaten very slowly in order not to retard the digestive processes.

Of course, in purchasing commercial cream it is important to know that it is made by a firm recognized for the sanitary conditions of its plant and that the cream has not been kept unduly long.

For once I'm sitting on the side of safety. I certainly get my two quarts of liquid intake and then some, not only painlessly, but with much pleasure through the happy habit of ginger ale—cleansing, refreshing, pure and healthful. Summer and winter there's always a bottle of pale dry on my ice and woe betide anyone who uses that bottle without replacing it from the case under the kitchen table.

For my first trip in the morning is straight to the icebox and a big glass of ginger ale takes the place of the water which should precede the daily dozen. And after rushing through the morning housework previous to departing for the office labor there's a last-minute refreshing swallow or two.

Ginger ale is my treasured evening friend, too. It's the solution of the refreshment problem for those guests who, when offered evening coffee, waver between offending their hostess and the fear of possible sleeplessness. So ginger ale is always safe, neutral ground. It's in the evening that I really show my ginger ale talent.

I've one special combination of fresh pineapple juice, lemon, lime and ginger ale that always calls for several encores. Then there's orange sherbert and ginger ale garnished with red cherries, and a continental punch of grape, orange and lemon juices, sugar and ginger ale that's hard to beat.

I think I'm becoming truly famous for my de luxe cup, a combination of grenadine syrup, fruit juices and ginger ale, not to mention my shandygaff punch, from hot fresh tea, lemons, sugar and G. A.

A nightcap was recommended to me by a famous physician, with the assurance that it would do much to keep the inner machinery in good running order. He told me, too, that for indigestion—which, praise be, I never have—there's nothing better than hot ginger ale. It is heated by placing a glassful in a surrounding bowl of steaming hot water.

There's only one word of warning on ginger ales. Be sure that it comes from a plant recognized for its cleanliness, where human contact is entirely eliminated and where the ginger flavor comes from the real ginger root and not from irritating capsicum. Such ginger ale is healthful for every member of the family, not forgetting the kiddies.

My doctor friend tells me that for children who don't like milk he's finding half milk and half ginger ale a delightful way of getting sufficient milk into little systems. Faithfully yours, MARTHA LEE.

Money Love

By BEATRICE BURTON

Author of "Sally's Shoulders" "The Hollywood Girl"

Which Power Is the Greater, Money or Love?

CHAPTER XIX.

LILY crept down to the landing and peered into the lower hall. Pat was facing her mother and slowly shaking his dark, handsome head. There was a small smile on the lips, but his blue eyes were serious and watchful.

"No, I couldn't wait on anybody's table, Mrs. Lexington," he said, in his deep voice that always stirred Lily almost as much as his touch stirred her. "You hired me to keep your automobile in order and drive it. I didn't mind washing the windows yesterday, or cleaning up the back yard the day before. But I certainly am not going to carry soup and fish around a table."

Mrs. Lexington's chin, that she always carried up lest she get a double chin, went up a fraction of an inch higher. "It would be only for a couple of days, Pat," she said to him coldly. "Just until I get someone to take Carrie's place."

He shook his head once again. I won't take Carrie's place even for two days. I'm no woman to be working around the kitchen, Mrs. Lexington. . . . I don't want to work around anything but automobiles anyway. If it was just work I wanted I could have gone into my own Dad's grocery store—"

"I'm not interested in your history, Pat!" Mrs. Lexington cut in sharply. "You'll either learn to wait on table tonight or go right now."

To Lily's amazement, Pat did not answer. She saw a dark red flush go over his face and neck, and he gave a little laugh and walked out of the house. The front door closed gently behind him.

She ran down the stairs. "Mother!" she cried. "That's a terrible thing to do—to make Pat wait on table! It's a dreadful thing for you to do!"

"It's nothing to be ashamed of—to wait on table. It's good, honest work," said Mrs. Lexington, as if she were making a speech on capital and labor. "When a man takes a job he ought to be willing to do anything he can to hold that job." She sailed into the little writing room at the end of the hall with a crisp rustling of her linen skirts, and sat down at the telephone.

Lily followed her, furiously indignant.

"Mother, you can't do a thing like that to Pat!" she went on. "You know he's in love with me, poor fellow. And he knows Stuley's coming to dinner, and that he'd have to wait on him—I hate Pat to leave us this way. What will he think of us?"

Her Mother Set Down the Phone and Turned Upon Her

Her mother set down the telephone that she had picked up and turned upon her. Her face was scarlet and her eyes were like points of steel. She smacked the telephone table smartly with the flat of her jeweled hand.

"Do you suppose I care for one minute what my chauffeur thinks of me?" she demanded, her voice shaking with rage. "Do you think I care how he leaves this house? All I care about is that he does leave before you lose your senses entirely, Lily Lexington! Running out of the house last night with that fellow! Let you know nothing about! Heaven knows where you were with him—and heaven alone knows what sin you lately!"

Lily told her, and all the anger went out of her face as she spoke, leaving it stamped with a kind of gentleness that never had shown itself there before.

"Love—that's what ails me lately," she said, with the new wisdom that had been slowing coming to her the weeks since she first laid eyes on Pat Frances in his khaki uniform and brown puttees. "I'm in love with him, and you can't stop me from being in love with him. I can't stop myself. Don't you suppose I would if I could? You know I like money just as well as the next one. Mother, but I love Pat. . . . Now, what am I going to do about it? You're my mother. You help me out."

It was an honest and desperate little plea. And not only that, but it was the first time that Lily Lexington ever had come to her mother for real help in her life—the first time that she ever had asked her for anything but things that could be bought—dresses or furs or rings of money for matinees.

Before now, Mrs. Lexington had never refused her anything. She never had failed to give her the dresses, the furs, the dancing slippers, the matinee tickets. "Lily must have everything that the other girls have," had always been her chorus.

But now that she was asking for something that she greatly needed—her mother's help in the biggest problem that ever had come to her—Mrs. Lexington refused it.

"What help do you need, I'd like to know?" she said. "Your future is all arranged for you—it's cut out like a pattern for a dress, and you know it, Lily. . . . You're engaged to Stuley Drummond—as fine a man as ever trod in two shoes—and you've promised to marry him on the tenth of June!"

Her Forefinger Shot Out and Tapped the Calendar

Her forefinger shot out and tapped that date on the desk calendar on the table before her. "The tenth of June and here you are telling me you're in love with my chauffeur! It's more than you ought to be ashamed of yourself!"

Lily's lovely hands twisted and untwisted like the thoughts behind her troubled eyes. "But is it decent to marry Stuley when I'm in love with another man? Isn't that something to be almost ashamed of, too?"

She veiled the problems that had been sweeping her this way and that for weeks, hoping that her mother would show her the right way to go—the right thing to do for all concerned.

"You see, I don't want to marry a poor man, Mother," she tried to explain. "I wish Pat had millions, but he hasn't. And yet I love him so much that I feel as if I can't let him go—"

"Nonsense him—nonsense" Mrs. Lexingtons' words cracked like a whip. "You're in love with a good-looking face and a pair of pulleys, that's all!"

She took down the receiver and spoke a number into the telephone—the number of the employment agency down town.

While she was waiting for central to give it to her she turned and finished what she had to say. "You just give in to your infatuation for this man, and you'll see where it lands you! You'll wake up some day and find out that there's more to a husband—than a straight nose and a nice head of hair. You'll wonder where your Pat's bank account is. You'll wonder where all your friends are—Sue Cain and Ann Harney, and all the rest of them. You'd better wake up, Lily, and think things over." All of which left Lily in the state of doubt that she had been in for weeks and weeks—not knowing from one minute to the next what she wanted to do.

However, the thing was settled for Lily within the next half hour of that warm and sunshiny May morning.

She left her mother telephoning for a new butler-chauffeur and ran upstairs.

From the sewing room came the steady hum of the sewing machine that was stitching hems and seams into her wedding clothes. Out in the backyard a carpenter was at work making a long, rough table that was to be covered with white satin and used to display all the wedding gifts that were beginning to come in—the silver coffee and tea service, the cut-glass cocktail glasses, a clock of real Sevres, a huge cigaret box of hammered brass and ebony.

Lily paused at the back window long enough to hear the cheerful sound of Pat whistling, "It All Depends on You."

"He's in his room in the ell," she said to herself, her eyes on the white curtains in the windows of the room. "I suppose he wants to have everything in order, or maybe he's packing his clothes".

Then, suddenly, she wheeled around from the window and flew to turn on the water in her bathtub. . . . She must see him before he went! She must make up her mind what to do now, before he was gone!

In record time she bathed, brushed her perfect teeth, combed the golden fluffy masses of her hair, and hurried into the soft silk underthings that she took from a sachet-lined drawer that scented them delicately like flower petals.

In the closet was an orchid and pink silk sports dress that her mother had bought for her trousseau—one of those simple handmade little dresses that French needlewomen make by hand and sell to women like Mrs. Lexington for exorbitant sums of money.

With only a second's hesitation Lily took it from its silk-padded hanger and put it on. On the closet shelf was a folded square of white tissue paper. Within it, Lily knew, was her real lace wedding veil just back from the dry cleaning shop.

Her "going away" hat of pale gray straw lined with shell-pink was in its perfumed box. The suit to match it hung in a dust-proof bag.

A new pale gray leather suitcase, with her initials on it in sterling silver, stood on the floor. Beside it was a little dressing-case that matched it.

The clothes closet and the big, luxuriously-furnished bedroom were filled with clothes and gloves and shoes and ornaments to make her a lovely bride for Stuley Drummond in three weeks' time.

Some flowers that had come from him were in an opened box on her dressing table. Across on her mother must have brought them up while she was taking her bath.

She put her face into them—lilies of the valley and white roses. Flowers for a bride—for a rich man's bride.

Then she laid them down and looked at them with thoughful eyes. . . . It came to her that she would be just like them if she married Stuley. Expensive and as carefully cared for as they had been cared for and tended in a hothouse.

But she didn't want a hothouse life. . . . She knew it now. She wanted the freedom and the freshness of ordinary happy married life with a man she loved. With Pat Frances.

If she had been a writer or a poet she would have told herself that what she wanted to be was a common garden variety wife. Common and gay as a yellow dandelion or a sunflower.

But Lily was not even a great reader. She had been too busy all her life enjoying herself to read about other people's joys and disappointments.

She only knew, in some vague half-formed way, that the flowers represented the life she was leaving without a regret—without a single regret.

"Even if I'm poor I reckon it won't be so hard to bear—if I have Pat," she told herself, going quietly down the back stairs of the house.

But she knew nothing about being poor. The only poverty she had even seen was in picture shows. And so she went to Pat's room with the lightest heart that ever had stirred in her breast.

She knocked on his door and went in. She had made up her mind completely and happily, at least.

Ginger Turned This Way and Then That Before the Mirror

Ginger turned this way and that before the mirror.

Nancy Deane Secures a Job and Becomes Supremely Happy

laughed, "you are in a hurry aren't you?"

The woman's pleasantness encouraged her. She pulled out the letter addressed to Howard Wescott and thrust it into her hands. The woman proved to be just the person Nancy was looking for. She said she was in charge of the employment of girls, that she would have the letter delivered to Mr. Wescott's office immediately—and would she please be seated?

As Nancy sat on the hard bench she watched the girls who hurried through the passageway, office girls, factory girls, girls, girls, girls—she wondered how they all lived. What kind of rooms they had.

'Mr. Wescott will see you, Miss O'Day."

The words brought her to her feet, and before she had time to be too frightened, she was standing in an inner office, thickly carpeted, before a large, glass-topped desk at which sat Howard Wescott. He had John Blair's letter on the desk before him. He rose, offered his hand, and asked Nancy to be seated.

Yes, this was their busy season: the mills needed girls. What could she do? What had she done?

Howard Wescott asked these questions almost in one sentence. "I, you see, I—"

Nancy tried to tell him that she had never done anything more than work in a restaurant. She lied, foolishly:

"I've always stayed home, Mr. Wescott. I've never really worked before—"

No sooner had she uttered the falsehood than she hated herself. She thought of all the fine girls she knew who were working. She blushed. Mrs. O'Day had so often told her never to be ashamed of any kind of honest work.

"In that case I believe I'll have to put you sorting. It's very simple work and I'm sure you will learn very readily."

Howard Wescott was the soul of business courtesy. He wasted no words. His was just about to ring for the woman whom Nancy had bumped into in the hall; he lifted his hand from the button, looked at Nancy closely, and asked:

"Where have I seen you before. He put his hand to his forehead, thinking.

Nancy thought that he must hear her heart pounding across the room. For the second time in the space of five minutes she found herself telling a lie.

"I don't know, Mr. Wescott. I don't think I've ever seen you before."

The gray-haired lady came in, noiselessly and Howard Wescott asked her to show Nancy to the sorting room. She was to come to work in the morning.

All in all, Nancy hadn't been inside the doors of the mills for more than 15 minutes. She ran down the steps of the building and into the street. She wanted to dance, to sing. She had a job. She hummed a little song and headed toward Columbus ave.

Ginger greeted Nancy's enthusiastic story of her new job with a loud laugh, and the more she thought about it the more she laughed.

"Oh, my Lord!" she said between her spasms of laughing.

"Can you imagine little Goldie Locus, our little slip of the valley, herself herself away in a dirty old factory. Sorting socks? A socks sorter. Oh my Lord!"

She stopped laughing suddenly, pulled her cigarette from its long imitation ebony holder, and sat up.

"Say kiddo," she said. "You know I like you. Just taken an awful fancy to you. You're such a kind of an innocent, or something, an' I want to help you.

"How'd you like to go modelin'?" Nancy had to ask her to repeat that.

"Modeling? Modeling what?"

"Why modelin' clothes, stupid. Clothes. The glad rags that is so important to us females' lives, the satins and satins that us girls be we one hundred years or one hour old, just must have to make us happy."

She stood up, draped her ostrich trimmed robe about her pretty form, struck a haughty pose, and trailed across the room.

"This is what I mean, sweet one, this."

She trailed back, pirouetted about, holding open the sheer silk robe as though it were a sable coat and she was exhibiting its silken lining. She relaxed, came but of her pose, sat down and lighted another cigarette.

Her mouth went down in one corner. She leaned over toward Nancy as though she was going to tip her off to something very secret.

"My sweet old sugar cookie" she began, "I can see that you're as green as the well known grass, but I like you. See? An' I want to help you. You just put yourself under my training for a week and I'll teach you the ways."

She paused to inhale from the cigarette.

"Ways, what ways?"

Nancy was beginning to be a little scared. Ginger seems so mysterious, so hard, all of a sudden.

"Why the ways of livin' without working your head off in a sock factory, or poundin' a damn old typewriter all day. I know. I've tried 'em both. You don't get nowheres that way. What you want to learn, Goldie, is how to use your sex appeal. Say, five minutes of the old appeal used the right way will get you farther than five years working your head off hammering a typewriter, or sorting socks."

She was in the light—sorting socks—half derisively.

"I'm not going to sort socks all my life, Ginger. I'm going to get started taking again."

"Say, Goldie, let me do the talkin'. I can see you're the kind of a girl that's got it, but you don't know it. You know that Elaine Glyn made herself famous for—discovering it. Just you listen to what Ginger has to say and then decide for yourself. For be it from me to influence any little innocent like you. Ah, I want to do is wise you up and then you can take my advice or leave it. I'm older than you and I know. See? I was just like you about five years ago. Fresh from a little town up north. See? It wasn't any town like Worcester with college stuff, understand. Just a little hick town. I ain't tellin' where it was. I'm through up there and them Main Street slander hounds are through sharpening their tongues on Ginger. See?"

She made a characteristic motion with her hands, dropped the corner of her mouth a bit lower and took another puff on her cigarette.

"What you want to do, kiddo, is to go modelin', like me. You got the looks and you got the figure, and with a little trainin' right here, I can get you wise to the swagger. All's you got to do is to think high hat, and pretend your blood is blue instead of red. And then you put a simp look on your face. One of those nobody home looks, and start trailin'.

"Say, Goldie, it's just a trick. Us models puts that strut on an' off just like we put on the glad rags and takes them off. And, believe me, the life of a model, rotten as it may be, is a damn lot better than workin' in a sock factory.

"Say, with a little foolin' and some of the soft stuff, I can do anything with Ziegelbaum. I'll talk to him about you tomorrow when we start rehearsin' for the style show."

"Ziegelbaum? Who is Ziegelbaum?"

It was the first word Nancy could get in since Ginger had become so aroused over the futility of pounding a typewriter or sorting stockings as compared with modeling.

Ginger stopped pacing and sat down on the edge of the unmade bed.

"Ziegelbaum's the works. He's the big guy down to Ziegelbaum's, Inc.; you know, 'Ziegelbaum's, Inc., Hats, Wraps, Gowns.' He's my boss and I, Goldie Locks, am his favorite model if I do say it myself. An' if I do say it myself, here's the reason."

Ginger threw back the dressing gown from her white shoulders and stood before her powder-besmeared mirror, turning this way and that, to get the best possible view of her slim young figure. She wore the frothiest kind of lingerie, rainbow tinted.

"It's my girlish figger that holds me my job. It's just the kind of a figure Ziegfeld—who's what I call him sometimes, Ziegfeld—falls for, and the old boy sure fell hard. That's why I'm so sure that I can get you in to do some modelin'.

"Why say, Goldie" It ain't every girl I'd bring in to run me competition that way. But gee, kiddo. There's something about you that I like. You're so darn innocent and pretty, and I just can't bear to see you workin' in a sock factory."

Nancy didn't see. All the time that Ginger was talking back and forth, smoking, talking, Nancy's spirits were sinking lower and lower. She had rushed into the house, bubbling with happiness to tell Ginger of her luck in landing the job, and she was told to keep quiet, to listen—to this.

"But Ginger," she said, "I couldn't be a model. I, why I don't know how. I've never even seen a stylish show. I think I'd be afraid. I don't intend to be a sock sorter, as you say, for the rest of my life. Just as soon as I can save a little money I am going to Borden's College and learn to be a secretary, or something."

"Righto, kiddo. Do just as you please, but remember the advice Ginger gave you. And if you ever change your mind just let me know."

Ginger started pulling on a dress, as though the entire matter were dismissed. Neither said anything for five minutes. Nancy couldn't. She was trying to weigh what Ginger had told her. Ginger was occupied with her makeup, involved in the complicated art of beading her long eyelashes.

Just when the silence was beginning to be heavy there were voices and loud laughing on the stairs. Someone was coming up to the third floor. Nancy recognized the voices of Vic Fleming and Jerry Durant.

THE BIDDING

West's Spade bid is overcalled by North with two Hearts, his major suit, and upon West's rebid, North shows his second suit, Clubs. South, with three cards of each of his partner's suit, takes the bid back to Hearts. West bidding three Spades, North passes, unable to go further without support from his partner, realizing that South's bid of three Hearts was simply a preference bid, not an aasist

THE PLAY

Trick 1. Declarer marks South as holding at least three Hearts by reason of the bidding, and therefore does not fear a third round ruff of the suit. Accordingly he plays the Queen of Hearts to the first trick as a sure means of making use of Dummy's Jack as an entry. South's play of the Deuce of Hearts causes North to shift to Clubs.

Tricks 7 and 8. Declarer takes the Diamond finesse first and subsequently finesses trumps, the Jack of Hearts entry into Dummy making both finesses possible. Against this line of play, the adversaries were helpless.

PUT IDLERS TO WORK

By LUCY LOWELL

THOSE busy people who wish to work and cannot because their friends insist upon turning their working hours into sociability may read here how one woman got around the problem and perhaps may use her method successfully in their own affairs.

She writes:

"Dear Miss Lowell:

"I have been very interested in the letters from readers on how to work in spite of your friends you have been printing, for I, too, had this trouble.

"I was not annoyed by great numbers of callers, but by two or three. I have a little dressmaking shop, and as these women were good patrons I could not take the risk of offending them. At the same time it was hard not to tell them to go away, for during the busy season I have to use every moment and often worked late at night when they had wasted so much of my day.

"My plan came about quite by chance. One day when I was especially busy I handed one of them a garment and asked if she would mind ripping the bastings. She looked a little surprised, but did as I asked and soon afterward remembered that she had an engagement. After that I always managed to have a bit of work for these friends and I asked them in such a casual way to do it that they suspected nothing nor could they very well refuse.

"It has been my experience that people who waste the time of others also waste their own; they do not like to work even for themselves, and much less for others. So it wasn't long before these friends began to drop in less often, knowing I always would have some little job for them. And now they only come when they have business with me, though we are as friendly as ever.

"My advice to the harassed workers with idle friends is to make the friends work with them. If they do the work it is bound to be a help; otherwise they will go away and cease to be a bother.

"MRS. G. T. H."

Well, what do YOU think of this method? To me it seems about the most tactful as well as the most clever of any suggested so far.

However, Lucy Lowell will be delighted to have a letter from YOU, as other readers would like to hear what YOU have to say on the subject.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

IT'S wonderful how many years a woman's love for a man can go on living on the memory of a six-weeks ardent courtship.

When a contented little wife reads the startling announcement that $17,000,000 is paid out in alimony yearly in this country, she can't help wondering who is getting her share.

A tiny pinprick will flatten the tire, and a tiny stab in the vanity will puncture the romance.

If a man won't neglect his business for her, a woman feels that his regard for her doesn't amount to much; and if he will, her regard for him doesn't amount to ANYTHING.

Many a man who looks at his poor, starving wife nibbling at her reducing diet and at his practically naked daughter sitting on the beach, wonders why he should give money to feed and clothe the heathen.

In order to find out who is your most dangerous rival, get a man to tell you about all the women in his life—and then look for the one he didn't mention.

The most amazing thing is the length of time it takes for an intelligent idea to penetrate the human brain. For instance, men struggled into shirts that went over the head for 80 years before anybody discovered the coat-shirt; and women who wear their dresses above their knees are still trying to sleep comfortably in nightgowns that reach to the toes.

To capture a man's imagination, requires art, poise, subtlety and watchful waiting; but once a woman gets into a man's imagination, no other woman can ever crowd her out.

At least once in her life, every woman makes the tragic error of mistaking a Lothario for a Lochinvar.

Sour Stomach
Sweetened instantly

Just a tasteless dose of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in water. That is an alkali, effective, yet harmless. It has been the standard antacid for 50 years among physicians everywhere. One spoonful will neutralize at once many times its volume in acid. It is the right way, the quick, pleasant and efficient way to kill the excess acid. The stomach becomes sweet, the pain departs. You are happy again in five minutes.

Don't depend on crude methods. Employ the best way yet evolved in all the years of searching. That is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor, Charles H. Phillips, since 1875.

Why Wall Street Call Loan Rates Fluctuate Widely

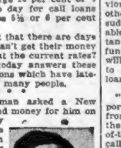
B. C. FORBES

New York, July 24—Why does Wall Street charge 10 per cent or 8 per cent on one day for call loans and only perhaps 5½ or 6 per cent the next day?

Also, why is it that there are days when outsiders can't get their money lent to brokers at the current rates?

This column today answers these and other questions which have lately been puzzling many people.

A well-to-do man asked a New York bank to lend money for him on call—that, by the way, is the name given to loans made for one day, subject to be withdrawn the next day. He received this reply:



B. C. Forbes

"We were unable to loan for your account as set forth in your letter of yesterday . . . As a matter of fact, it was impossible even to place that amount today, there was very little demand for money, the rate sagging from an 8 per cent renewal to 6 per cent on the board, outside money at 4 per cent.

"We have been given to understand that the Stock Exchange were unable to lend $15,000,000 more, placed with them by banking institutions for that purpose."

He sends me that letter with this comment: "In view of the statement coming from official quarters in control of rates for money that the reason for the recent high rate was the tightness of money, I am unable, as a layman, to reconcile these statements with the statements made in this letter. Will you enlighten me?"

I put the whole matter up to Francis H. Sisson, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, who combines a thorough knowledge of banking with an unusual faculty for making things clear to the average mind. Mr. Sisson writes:

"In order to understand the recent wide fluctuations in call money rates one must realize that in spite of the total of four to five billion dollars in brokers' loans a change of $75,000,000 to $50,000,000 in the supply of money available in any one day can make the difference between extreme tightness and abundance in the money market. On any given date brokers must have a certain amount of money, with little possible flexibility in their requirements. When, therefore, $27,000,000 is taken out of the market at one time, potentially all this must be replaced, and brokers who have had their loans called must bid for money at rates to attract funds which have not previously been in the market. On the other hand, if a similar amount is suddenly made available, it is probable that no new demand will simultaneously manifest, and the new funds must be offered at rates which will make it attractive for borrowers to take off some of their existing loans and make new ones.

"The fact that such a large proportion of call money is supplied from outside of New York adds to the instability of the market. Out-of-town lenders ordinarily decide to call in or put out money on the basis of the rates prevailing at the close of the previous business day, whereas by the time their funds or their call for funds have reached the market the situation may have changed materially, but they are not sufficiently close to the situation to adapt their action to rapid changes.

"The condition prevailing during the last few weeks illustrates what has been said above. June 30, the date when all banks make their semi-annual statements, came on a Saturday. A large proportion of the Federal Reserve member banks were borrowing from the central institutions, and, naturally, declined to show the minimum of loans on that day.

"In order to do this a number of them apparently allowed the reserves at the federal to run below the required amount for the week-end, as, under the semi-weekly adjustment of reserves, they had until Tuesday to recover the situation.

"On Monday, therefore, there was a very heavy calling of loans, probably amounting to $75,000,000 or $75,000,000, and as the result money climbed steadily to 10 per cent during the afternoon. Then $50,000,000 of Cert-Teed Pro 42 42 42 41⅞

HAROLD LLOYD TO PLAY ROLE OF BOTANIST

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 24—Harold Lloyd won't have to do much disguising to play a bespectacled botanist. He looks like a scientist with the owl glasses he uses as a prop. He can keep right in character in "The Butterfly Chaser," his next picture, in which he plays a botanist.

Harold has spent every minute he could spare from that grand new home he has built for Mildred and Gloria, to prepare this story. It's a little more serious than some of its predecessors, but is also sympathetic, with some of the qualities that made "Grandma's Boy" so popular.

So that the new mansion in Beverly Hills which, by the way is some little cottage, won't distract his attention, Harold and his staff are leaving for a hideaway in the mountains. Here he and John L. Murphy, production manager, the gag men and the director, will talk story. The exteriors are to be taken in San Francisco.

And now, like a woman's postscript, I will tell the most interesting part of the story. "The Butterfly Chaser" will be the first Lloyd comedy to be made with sound. Harold hopes by the time he gets ready to put his picture into production the sound stage being erected at the Metropolitan studios by the Christie Brothers will be ready for him. Wonder what the fans will say to Harold's using sound?

CERTAINLY if Tiffany-Stahl are looking for youth they cannot do better than to team Sally O'Neill and Buster Collier, Jr. These two youngsters are the personification of modern youth, and they represent in the hearts of hundreds of boys and girls all over the country, the collegiate idea.

Both Sally and William Collier, Jr., are under contract to this company, and both of them are to be starred in "The Floating College," a modern story of a modern school. I assume it is largely comedy for George Crowe, who made so many of Douglas MacLean's comedies, will handle the megaphone.

Sally, by the by, looks about fourteen these days, with her light sport clothes, her socks and her long hair, which she permits to hang. You could put her doll in her hand and she wouldn't look out of place.

THEY are digging down into the films of yesterday for ideas. They, meaning, of course, our film producers. "The Charm School," by Alice Duer Miller, in which Wallace Reid played the lead, is to be brought back by Famous Players-Lasky, and produced on an elaborate scale. Curiously enough, when these old-time favorites are resurrected producers feel they must be rechristened and disguised.

I wonder if that is really necessary? There shouldn't be any more hesitancy in going to see a one-time popular picture than there is in reading a favorite book or going to see a well loved stage play. In the movies we are frequently ashamed of things we shouldn't be ashamed of, and frequently not ashamed of things we should bury our heads over.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE'S future plans may take her away from the United Artists' studio. Connie has no definite contract with Joseph Schenck or that company, only a verbal agreement to make a picture. Since over six months have elapsed since that arrangement was made, it is natural that Connie should be looking about and thinking of accepting some of the other offers made.

She was first slated for "East and the Setting Sun," then this was abandoned. Then she was chosen as John Barrymore's leading lady in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney." Then that was sold to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for Norma Shearer, and now Connie is without a story or without any definite plans.

She should make a picture, if not at United Artists, somewhere else, for she has been off the screen far too long and she is too popular to make the mistake of getting the public out of the habit of seeing her.

ROBERT LEONARD will direct Norma Shearer in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney." Bob knows his comedy as so few directors. I am convinced of that after seeing "Her Cardboard Lover," Marion Davies' last picture. And Norma knows how to wear her clothes as do few actresses. She gives her customers personality and after Lizzie Cluts, out in Cedarville, sees her, she goes home and tries to copy the Shearer styles. I should say that Norma is a boon to the village dressmakers, for she seems always to have something different in her wardrobe.

RAQUEL TORRES, the pretty Spanish girl who is said to promise a sensation in "White Shadows of the South Seas" has been very sick with threatened pneumonia. She is much better and will undoubtedly be able to make an appearance when the picture opens here at a later date. Speaking of "White Shadows," few films have been as much discussed. It is mentioned as one of the prize films of 1928.

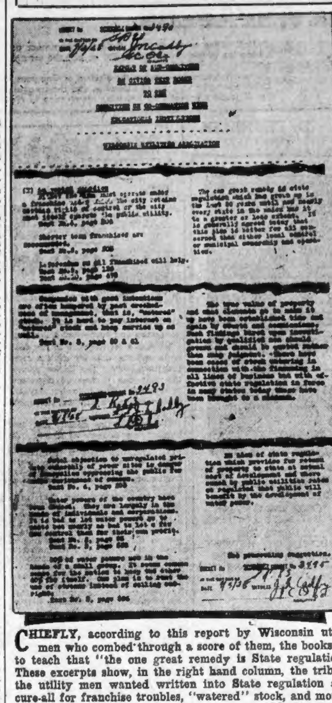
SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Al Jolson departing merrily for Arrowhead to fish. Anita Stewart dashing into the villa Carlotta with her makeup on. Louise Fasenda making some of the girls laugh by telling a funny story. Fred Niblo receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter.

Edna Murphy with her hair worn long. Delores Del Rio with long braids tucked up. Estelle Taylor on location at Long Beach. George O'Brien shaking hands with Mayor Walker and listening to praise for his father, Chief of Police O'Brien. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Even in Some School Books



CHIEFLY, according to this report by Wisconsin utility men who combed through a score of them, the books fail to teach that "the one great remedy is State regulation." These excerpts show, in the right hand column, the tributes the utility men wanted written into State regulation as a cure-all for franchise troubles, "watered" stock, and monopoly of the nation's water power resources. All the utilities support State regulation, often secretly and politically, it is shown in the Federal Trade Commission record of which this report is a part. Some of the books found "objectionable" were revised, it was testified by John N. Cadby, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Utilities Association, who did most of the reviewing. But Cadby said he could not remember which books they were.

CATHOLICS GAIN NEARLY 20 P. C. IN 10 YEARS

Washington, July 24 (AP)—The membership of the Roman Catholic church in the United States totalled 18,604,850 persons in 1926, an increase of nearly 20 per cent over the total membership of 10 years before, which was reported as 15,721,815. The figures were made public today by the census bureau as a part of its regular decennial count of religious body membership.

Catholic churches in 1926 numbered 18,939, as compared with 17,375 in 1916.

Census returns for a number of the larger Protestant denominations have been announced by the bureau for 1926, but are still incomplete and such large groupings as the Southern Baptist convention have yet to be enumerated.

METHODISTS 4,080,777

A total membership of 4,080,777 was reported for the Methodist Episcopal church for 1926, with 26,130 churches, as compared with 29,315 churches and 3,717,785 members in 1916. The Methodist Episcopal Church South had 18,096 churches and 2,487,694 members in 1926, as compared with 19,184 churches and 2,114,479 members in 1916.

The Northern Baptist convention in 1926 had 7,612 churches and 1,290,438 members against 3,145 churches and 1,232,135 members in 1916.

The Protestant Episcopal church for 1926 reported 7,299 churches with 1,858,966 members while in 1916 it was credited with 7,345 churches and 1,092,821 members.

PRESBYTERIANS 1,894,030.

The Presbyterian church in the United States for 1926 reported 8,947 churches and 1,894,030 members, against 9,639 churches and 1,611,251 members in 1916.

There were 6257 Congregational churches with 801,846 members in 1926, against 5863 churches and 791,274 members in 1916.

The Negro Baptist Church in 1926 had 22,081 churches and 3,196,823 members, while in 1916 it had 21,071 churches and 2,938,579 members.

The Disciple of Christ had 7643 churches and 1,377,595 members in 1926 against a 1916 church total of 8796 with 1,226,023 members.

All of the Protestant denominations, the bureau explained, have a number of federated churches in which two or more denominations are associated.

SAN FRANCISCO DRUNKS SROW BIG INCREASE

San Francisco, July 24—Records of the police department made public today shop 13,236 persons were held for drunkenness last year. The number of arrests for intoxication in 1921 was 3497. There has been an annual increase since 1921.

3 WEE MEN IN BOAT ALARM BEVERLY

Beverly, July 24—"Three men in a boat sailed off—sailed they"—and it took almost the entire police department to find and get them back again before another day had dawned.

They were somewhat tiny men. Charles and Paul Day are only five and seven years old and Wilbur Legrew is but two years above Paul, but in the trio the spark of adventure glows.

It was about 7 p. m. (6 bells, if you will have it that way) when the spark fanned into flame.

Charlie and Paul, who are sons of Tax Collector Jamse S. Day, and Wilbur borrowed a half dory at Woodbury Beach and rowed it over the sea.

Eight o'clock came, and 9 and 10, and the mist-dimmed crescent of the moon slid across the arch of the heavens and began descent to the west.

Things began to stir in the Day and Legrew homes, and at police headquarters, and in the office of Harbor Master Carl Foster.

The harbor master is versed in the way of Beverly kids with a penchant for adventure on the water. Taking with him Officer William McCarthy they chugged to Salem Willows in a power boat and—just as Foster had anticipated—the youngsters were setting out for home in their purloined craft.

It was early today when the trio arrived back at the Jubilee Yacht Club.

2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defence.
4. Federal action to fix limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.

A Back Bay Eyesore

Railroad Yards Side by Side With Boylston Street

When representative business men complain that the presence of the Exeter Street yards of the Boston & Albany Railroad retards progress and growth in that section and "has a depreciating effect upon more than $25,000,000 worth of neighborhood property," they call attention to a situation in which every citizen should take an interest.

For the present, the men of several allied organizations interested in progress Back Bayward content themselves with asking the Department of Public Utilities to direct the New Haven and Albany railroads to build ONE Back Bay railroad station, to take the place of THREE. Upon this request a public hearing will be held on Thursday afternoon. The petitioner is Mayor Nichols.

But ultimately the eight organizations interested are to enter with vigor upon a campaign to rid the Back Bay of a railroad yard such as is seldom seen in the heart of an important city.

Leaders of the movement picture this area as "susceptible of development in a way that will benefit the city and those who have investments in the district WITHOUT INJURY TO THE RAILROADS."

Passersby on Boylston Street have remarked upon what appears to be the wastefulness of permitting land so advantageously situated to be used exclusively for such a purpose.

But the great growth in Back Bay realty values, from the viewpoint of "business," is a comparatively recent development. The railroad corporation may have felt that it could afford to wait, may be of the opinion that waiting is still the better policy.

The yards ARE an eyesore. If they can be removed or covered, with profit to the railroad, everybody will be happy. How shall business convince the "B. & A." that now is the time to "cash in"?

Eyes on the Governorship

They WOULD Take SECOND Place—to "Start With"

When you read that the number of Republican aspirants for the Lieutenant-Governorship had reached ten, did you try to name them all? And with what success?

The reason for this army of candidates is, of course, the "rule" that the Lieutenant-Governor, after his "chief" has served two terms, is asked to move up to the head of the table.

All of our Governors, it is true, have not served such an apprenticeship, as witness William L. Douglas, Eugene N. Foss and Samuel W. McCall.

Nor has every Lieutenant-Governor attained to Beacon Hill's high chair. Louis A. Frothingham, Robert Luce, Edward P. Barry and Grafton D. Cushing are recalled as Lieutenant-Governors who reached second place and in State politics, at least, went no higher.

But the roll of those who have followed the regular course —Wolcott, Crane, Bates, Guild, Draper, Walsh, Coolidge, Cox and Fuller—is impressive enough to have established the rule and probably ambitious men of ability are wise to follow it.

The present number of contenders appears to be without precedent. Here are their names in the alphabetical order which will be followed on the ballot. See how many of them there are about whom you can say, "I know who HE is and what he has done":

George A. Bacon, Springfield; Charles L. Burrill, Boston; Fehr G. Holmes, Worcester; John C. Hull, Leominster; Robert M. Leach, Taunton; Wycliffe C. Marshall, Watertown; Arthur K. Reading, Cambridge; John H. Sherburne, Brookline; Wellington Wells, Boston; William S. Youngman, Boston.

If Republican supremacy is to be continued, this list contains the name of the man who will be our next Lieutenant-Governor and, probably, a future Governor. With these suggestions before him the Republican voter will choose with care. The instances in which a "wrong 'un" has found favor on the State ticket in Massachusetts are so very, very few that most of us can name the names. Reason enough for picking and choosing this year with vigilance.

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 24—Recently a New Yorker selected an expensive type of motor car. He ordered certain changes, a few additional trinkets to dude it up, and that night thinking it over—the vast expense of upkeep and such—had a sinking spell.

He sent a frantic wire to the dealer to call the deal off until a more propitious time. The dealer phoned the next day it was all right and to forget it. The following day the customer was again in the mood to buy.

He visited the dealer and told him of his change of heart. "Go ahead with the arrangements," he said, and deposited a substantial sum. To his surprise the dealer told him the car was ready in every particular, even to the monogram on the door.

The explanation was that in a deal of this sort there was always a touch of "cold feet." A purchaser almost invariably reaches a certain point and backs down completely. But in the end recovers his mental poise and the sale is consummated.

Jewelers especially are subjected to this sort of vacillation. Wives buying ropes of pearls in almost every instance arrive at a state of hysteria in the negotiations. They are swept up to the dazzling heights over the prospect, and then drop plummet-like into the depths.

There is the story of the wife of a millionaire who became so unstrung over a $400,000 diamond bracelet deal she wound up in a sanitarium for a month's stay. And the amusing climax was she included another bracelet in the final purchase.

Salesmen who handle such emotionalisms are adept psychologists. The instant a customer begins to waver, they immediately assume an attitude of complete indifference. For they know if a purchaser excites himself enough to grow slightly hysterical it will be followed by a calm—and a sale.

TAILORS used to be the worst victims of extravagant backdowns. Customers who called to buy a single suit often bought a half dozen and after the cloth was cut tried to wiggle out of purchases. The tailor, of course, had to insist on his rights and in the end lost the customer. With a heavy order—unless the customer is well known—the tailor now makes only one suit at a time.

UNTIL a few years ago, a customer rarely paid for a tailor-made suit until a year had elapsed. The hapless tailor was forced to wait and say nothing. Now, tailors insist upon monthly settlements just as any other merchant. And this information, my dears, does not come in a roundabout way.

EVERYONE beginning a writing career has an idea the first requisite is a pull, and so seeks an introduction to literary marts through an established writer. Nothing is so fallacious. No endeavor stands so thoroughly on its own feet as writing, and it happens the so-called pull is often a handicap. Material submitted with a fanfare of trumpeting is likely to be looked upon with a more critical eye than work that comes unheralded.

EVERY enterprising editor is interesting in discovering a new writer and developing him. This achievement is a real feather in his cap. It requires no ingenuity or discernment to buy or order the wares of the writer who has won success. But when an editor salvages out of the pile of manuscripts one that clicks he has an inclination to let out a wild whoop and ring a few doorbells.

A GENTLEMAN described as a "psychic mentalist" is appearing at afternoon teas and gently coaxing guests to reveal hidden secrets in their eyes. They'll never get me to one of them. It's no place for a mandolin player.

SEEING Is One Thing

the public, including children at school and students in universities.

Editors, publishers of school books, and college professors are paid by the power trust to spread the idea that GOVERNMENT SHOULD NOT OWN OR OPERATE ITS OWN POWER, and that the gigantic public wealth stored away in natural power sources should be exploited by PRIVATE individuals.

Industry, wealth, national prosperity depend on POWER.

Wealth comes from machinery directed by intelligence. And machinery requires power.

Those that control the power in a nation, CONTROL THE NATION, and its sources of wealth.

Part of this power trust propaganda is shown in the fight against the Boulder Dam bill which would enable the Government to harness the Colorado River, supplying power and water for irrigation and city use to millions of Americans at low prices.

The power gentlemen don't WANT the millions of Americans to have power AT LOW PRICES. That would interfere with THEIR profits.

Many hear these things, many see cartoons like this making the point clear.

But unfortunately those that SEE far outnumber those that THINK.

And thinking, plus voting as you think, are the only things that count. The question is, shall the power resources of the United States, created by the rainfall and the flow of rivers to the sea, be owned by the NATION, or shall they be owned, controlled and exploited at the people's cost by selfish private interests?

MOSES AND THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

MOSES was a Jew, the great-grandson of Levi, the great-great-grandson of Jacob, who was the first Israelite, and the great-great-great-grandson of Abraham, who was the first Hebrew.

In China they boast of pedigrees 30 centuries long; the only people that can show anything to equal this are the Jews. The proud Jew of this day can look down with contempt upon the Hohenzollerns, the Romanoffs and the Guelphs of Europe, "whose blood has crept through scoundrels since the flood." But to the Egyptians Moses was a slave's son. He was to them as a black baby, born in a Louisiana slave-hut, would have been to the Southern aristocracy in 1850.

Time had a grim humor. The monarchs of Egypt are today only known as contemporaries of Moses. The Czar of Russia will be known as the contemporary of Tolstoy.

Moses goes up into smoking Sinai and has a conversation with the thunder and lightning. What did they say to him? He shows us when he comes down. There on a stone slab are graven the Ten Commandments.

Whether he really spoke with God, or whether he had a hypnotic fit up there in the thunderstorm, the fact remains that in some way he got hold of the toughest, most everlasting and fireproof bundle of truths any son of man ever found.

Nobody ever argues with those Ten Words. They certainly have the smell of thunder about them. When they roar down into the caverns of the soul we know they are as true as ourselves. Philosophers and sensualists, wise men and fools, have gnawed at these same tables of stone, but they stand clear; no substitute has ever been allowed, no amendment has received a respectable vote.

The Ten Commandments are the most important words in history. They were given by Moses to the Jews, but they have been generally accepted throughout Christendom as the foundation of all law and morals.

They are the basis of society in the civilized world.

There is no other instance in history where a rule has been recognized and obeyed by the mass of the most intelligent people for over 3000 years. They are not merely religious teachings inculcated by the church. They lay their restraining hand on every human being.

They function in the home, the market, the street and office. They hold in the wild places of the earth and in the farthest seas.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE Summer Squatter is upon us. She has been upon Jane for 18 weary, wrangling weeks. Read Jane's letter. Full upon it, rather, with yelps of sympathy, for Jane voices the secret heard throb of about 3,000,000 other long-suffering hostesses and peevish hosts.

"Dear Elsie Robinson:

"I don't know whether you handle problems like mine in your column, but it seems very important to me. My sister-in-law, who is three years older than I (I am nearly 32), came to visit my husband and me, supposedly for two or three weeks. It is now 16 weeks and there is no sign of leave-taking yet.

"I am employed with very long hours. I try very hard to be a neat housekeeper and it is hard for me to manage. Yet she never offers to help with the meals or the housework. I find the flat at night all disordered. I cannot even take my bath without first scrubbing out the tub. The additional work is wrecking me.

Nor are we able to stand the financial strain. We have only been married a year and we are still paying for our furniture. Her being here increases all the expenses. My laundry bill has doubled and, as it is rough dry, I have to stand and iron until late at night.

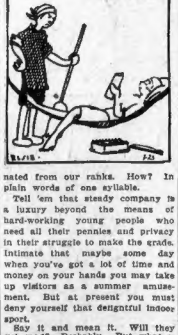
"I do not feel that I can tell her to go home, for it would injure the feelings of all the family. My husband has asked her a number of times when she is going and she always says, 'Soon, I guess'—but she doesn't go. Is there any tactful way of getting rid of an unpleasant guest?

"JANE J."

We DO handle problems like yours in this column, Jane. And, believe me, dear, when it comes to heart interest, they have discussions of tariff reforms, income taxes and foreign politics skinned. One unwelcome guest can raise more Cain in a happy American home than a dozen Balkan wars. And it's time we developed a snappy technique for handling such squatters.

We're constantly being imposed upon by grafters, bores, meddlers and other loafers. They clutter our homes, consume our time, waste our money, eat our grub and harrow our feelings. Yet we hesitate to fire them because we dislike to be "rude." There is no virtue in such hesitation. Self-preservation is the first law of nature—particularly in homes. It isn't saintly to tolerate a nuisance in the house—it's stupid and spineless.

A pest is a pest, even if it is a member of your own family—and it should be treated as a pest. The unwelcome, inconsiderate guest should be coolly but firmly eliminated from our ranks. How? In plain words of one syllable.



Tell 'em that steady company is a luxury beyond the means of hard-working young people who need all their pennies and privacy in their struggle to make the grade. Intimate that maybe some day when you've got a lot of time and money on your hands you may take up visitors as a summer amusement. But at present you must deny yourself that delightful indoor sport.

Say it and mean it. Will they get mad? Probably. But what is they do? Homes must be protected. And a spasm of peevishness cannot possibly do as much harm, in the long run, as the corroding irritation and waste caused by such visitations.
